Naval Units Sail Dangerous Waters In Supporting Role

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Aug. 16.—U. S. Marines, fighting in the sweltering rains of the Tulagi area and supported by naval units in the dangerous waters of Sealark and Indispensable channels, were tightening their grip in the Solomons tonight as the battle ended its tenth day.

From Washington's infrequent reports and the fanfare of fabulous victory propaganda blaring unceasingly from Japanese radio stations that one fact emerged tonight from the battle area up near the equator.

Tucked in almost as an afterthought in their latest upward revision of Solomon Island successes—which claimed 40 Allied ships sunk and 58 planes shot down—Japanese broadcasts today grudgingly conceded that "the battle is continuing between our forces and American Marines who succeeded in landing."

Previously the Japanese had asserted that the few leathernecks remaining were being liquidated, and had claimed 35 ships sunk and five damaged from the United Nations' naval forces which took the Nipponese garrisons by surprise a week ago Friday.

Yap Boast of Successes. Yesterday, Japanese, if mentioning land operations at all, asserted that the position of the Marines was hopeless.

After regaling Australian listeners with a lengthy list of Allied vessels the Japanese contend they have sunk off the Solomons, the Tokyo announcer today shouted in a burst of enthusiasm, "Yes sir, we've smashed down enemy ships that challenged us. There's plenty of room at the bottom of the sea for more."

This program, directed to Australia, concluded with the playing of the record "I Have My Eyes on You."

Meanwhile, William M. Hughes, a member of the Pacific War Council, in a speech at Sydney hailed the Solomon Island offensive as a "revelation of the strength of our ally, America."

Marines Superior. "It is in an entirely different category from the Midway and Coral sea battles, as it marks the turning by the Allies for the first time to the offensive," he said.

"It has been shown that man for man the Japanese are not equal to the United States Marines."

Under the conditions of the battle the area the Marines were in need of all their stamina, for the area is drenched by hot rains much of the time.

2 Destroyers, 6 Freighters Are Launched

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 16.—(AP)—In a mighty effort to strengthen the United Nations' seapower, Maine shipbuilders sent two speedy destroyers and six big merchant vessels into the water in a mass launching that required less than four hours.

Ranking Army, Navy and government figures joined the workmen, their families and guests in colorful ceremonies at which Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. Maritime Commission chairman, told the shipbuilders the "commission is convinced there is almost no limit to your productivity."

The program was broadcast on an NBC radio hookup and by short-wave to Europe.

In the greatest single launching event of the second World War, the Todd-Bath Iron Shipbuilding Corporation opened ponderous steel gates to permit fussing tugboats to haul five 10,000-ton cargo carriers, built for Great Britain, into Portland harbor.

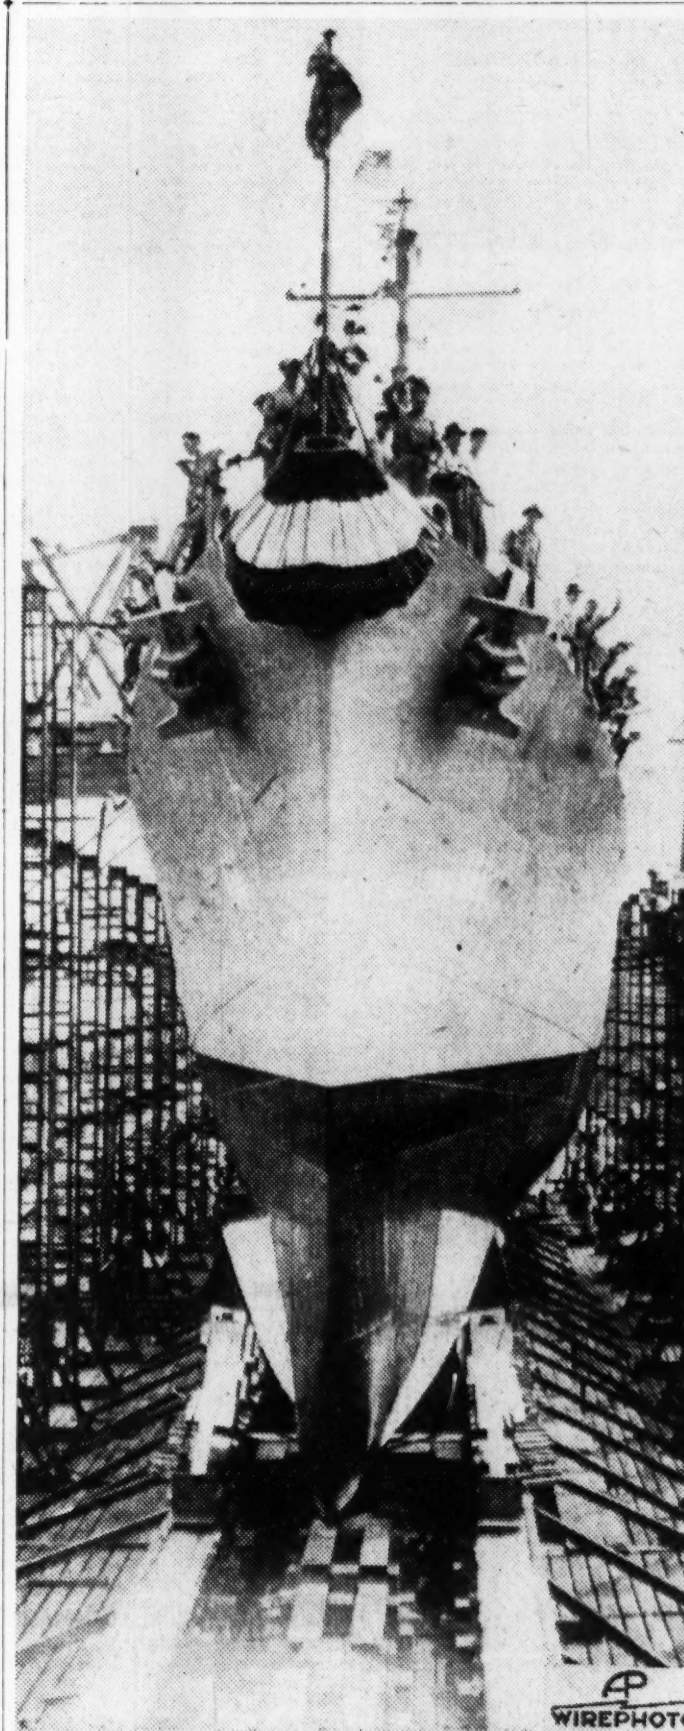

Two of the five, the Ocean Seaman and Ocean Gallant, required only 48 days from keel laying to launching, nine days faster than the yard's best previous time. The other three, the Ocean Stranger, Ocean Wayfarer and Ocean Traveller, were in the basins 61 days.

The sixth freighter, the Liberty ship Ethan Allen, 10,500 tons, slid down the ways of the Maritime Commission's adjacent south Portland shipbuilding corporation yard which, like the Todd-Bath plant, was swampland less than two years ago.

The Ethan Allen required 200 days' work.

The trim destroyers slid into the Kennebec river from the yard of the Bath Iron Works Corporation.

Speaking at both yards here before most of the dignitaries went to Bath to see the destroyers enter the water, Admiral Land declared: "We must make time work for us and allow none of that time to be wasted."

Blimp Lands In Coast City; Crew Missing

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—(AP)—A Navy patrol blimp, buckled into a V shape, landed crewless and out of control in a street in suburban Daly City today and collapsed. Naval authorities at once began a search for the two officers known to have been aboard.

One of the blimp's depth charges, which was missing from the crumpled craft, was found later five miles from Daly City on the Olympic Club's lakeside golf course. The bomb was unexploded. It evidently had been scraped off when the blimp touched the ground.

Descended Slowly.

The craft, one of an undisclosed number of anti-submarine patrol blimps along the Pacific coast, descended slowly onto the Daly City street.

Residents, who saw it drift in from the ocean to the southwest, said one of the blimp's two bomb racks was intact. The craft's gasoline supply was gone, they said.

Parachutes of the blimp were in place, indicating that the two officers might have leaped from the craft into the Pacific. They presumably had life jackets.

Army, Navy, Coast Guard and state highway patrol forces participated in the search for the missing blimp men.

The names of the officers aboard were not disclosed.

Wreckage Guarded.

John Scott, of Daly City, one of the first to sight the distressed craft, said it drifted in from the ocean on a strong wind. As it came close enough to perceive detail, he noted that it had buckled. It was settling gradually.

Just above the street level it dragged across several telephone and electric light wires.

A Navy crew assisted by soldiers and police threw a guard around the wreckage and quickly removed the remaining bomb and other important equipment.

Police Sergeant William T. Brannan expressed belief the blimp had grazed a hillside somewhere in its wandering, because, he said, the right propeller was bent and the right motor had "bits of earth on it."

GERMAN "RADIO" TREASON.

BERN, Switzerland, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The Frankfurter Zeitung reported today that a German, Erich Deibel, was executed at Wetzlar yesterday for high treason and "crimes by radio." This was one of the few times that German execution announcements have specified the nature of the crime.

Sapru Urges Parliamentary Mission to India

ALLAHABAD, India, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, India's most prominent lawyer who has served in the past as intermediary between the British and Mahatma K. Gandhi, urged today that Britain send a parliamentary delegation to India to discuss settlement of the Indian question with Congress party leaders.

Sapru himself is understood to be preparing to visit the British viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, at New Delhi.

"The political issues should be tackled with constructive statesmanship, imagination and courage," Sapru added in a prepared statement.

"I very carefully considered in the light of the past five days' happenings whether it would serve any useful purpose at this stage for anyone not belonging to the two big political parties to act as intermediary between them and the government."

"I am not hopeful of... step like this leading to any fruitful results. No intermediary can succeed unless he has the authority to speak on behalf of the government."

Sapru said members of parliament "cannot divest themselves of responsibility. They must wake up and not allow themselves to be lulled into a false sense of security."

"It is not doing good either to India or England to tell everybody in England that the situation in India is not an anxious one. The country must be saved from the calamities which are certain to overtake it in the footsteps of all that is happening at present..."

"In my opinion things have not gone so far that mutual discussion with broad-minded members of parliament can be ruled out as impossible—impossible either on the ground of prestige or on the ground that they would be evidence of weakness."

Nazis Fail To Get Soviet Fuel Facilities.

MOSCOW, Monday, Aug. 17.—(AP)—Soviet Russia announced officially today that the Caucasus oil city of Maikop had fallen to the Germans, but only after all oil supplies and equipment had been saved from the city and the oil establishments themselves "made completely unusable."

The report of the loss of another Russian city to the Germans was issued as German infantrymen, tanks and planes pressed in full force against the massive Russian artillery defending the approaches to Stalingrad, on the Volga.

Heavy Fighting Continues.

The midnight communique of the Soviet bureau of information indicated heavy fighting was continuing deeper in the Caucasus as well as in the two fronts threatening Stalingrad.

How well the Russians applied their famous scorched-earth policy to their precious oil possessions of the Maikop, which normally produced 7 per cent of Russia's oil, was told in this graphic announcement of the communique:

"Our troops have left the town of Maikop."

"Equipment of the Maikop oil industries and all supplies of oil were evacuated in time and the oil establishments themselves were made completely unusable."

"Fascists... Miscalculated."

"The German Fascists, who expected with the capture of Maikop to enrich themselves at the expense of Soviet oil, have miscalculated."

"They did not get the Soviet oil and will not get it."

"The German high command in rapid-fire special communiques of August 9 announced the capture of the Caucasus cities of Maikop and Krasnodar. The Soviets today reported fighting still was continuing in the Krasnodar area, despite the German claims."

An indication that tremendous

HENRY NEVIN
Will Support Ellis Arnall.

Two Talmadge Stalwarts Join Arnall's Ranks

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

Two more former Talmadge stalwarts joined the rapidly increasing ranks of Arnall supporters yesterday.

They are Henry Nevin, Whitfield county leader, and Arthur L. De La Perriere, of Jackson county.

Out of industrial Dalton and Whitfield county, where Governor Talmadge, Saturday attempted to bring a hostile camp of voters into line with his one-man race issue, came word that he had lost Nevin, one of the outstanding Talmadge leaders of two years ago.

Senate Official.

Nevin, assistant secretary of the Georgia senate, stated simply he "could not continue to follow a fellow like Talmadge and feel respectable about it."

A son of the late James B. Nevin, for many years editor of the Atlanta Georgian, Henry Nevin, himself, is a former editor of two Dalton newspapers. He has served as assistant secretary of the state senate during the last three administrations.

Yesterday, Nevin announced his unqualified support of Ellis Arnall for Governor.

Former Supporter.

During the campaign of two years ago, Nevin introduced Talmadge to the people of Whitfield county when the Governor spoke in Dalton as a candidate for his third term.

When Talmadge spoke in Dalton Saturday, Nevin was absent from the meeting.

"It's just impossible for true Georgians, interested in the welfare of our state and its institutions, to continue to follow a fellow like Talmadge and feel respectable about it," said Nevin.

Talmadge and his Gestapo gang of cutthroats are hell-bent on wrecking our public school system and setting up a pardon-racketeering dictatorship in Georgia that would make Huey Long look like a piker.

"If I know anything about the people of my native state of Georgia, they're not going to stand for it any longer and when the votes are counted September 9, Gene Talmadge is going to find out that all those 'A' stickers on cars stand for 'Arnall and A-lected.'"

The conversion of Nevin to the ranks of Ellis Arnall is but one of many interesting announcements from north Georgia political leaders in the last two weeks.

De La Perriere, of Hoschton, in Jackson county, yesterday offered his views of the political situation as it exists today in that area north of Atlanta. De La Perriere, a strong Arnall booster today, has been a strong Talmadge supporter in the past along with his brother, Herman, who has served as pur-

17 Killed as Big Army Plane Crashes on Top of Mountain

Sergeant Drags Four From Blazing Wreck

PERU, Mass., Aug. 16.—(AP)—A large Army transport plane carried 17 men to flaming death last night when it crashed on isolated, 2,200-foot Garnet Peak on Peru Mountain, located in one of the most inaccessible spots in the Berkshires.

Three severely burned survivors of the crash, which with the exception of mishaps to lighter-than-air craft, was one of the worst tragedies in the history of United States military aviation.

Shearing off the tops of trees for a distance of about 100 yards before it crashed onto a level area atop the peak, the plane immediately burst into flames, the public relations officer at Westover Field said.

Sergeant Robert Lee, of Columbus, Ohio, his clothes completely burning, was one of the three survivors of the crash, which with the exception of mishaps to lighter-than-air craft, was one of the worst tragedies in the history of United States military aviation.

First, he carried out Private James Fern, of Abingdon, Va., and Private Alonzo Pearson, of Windber, Pa., who were given a good chance for recovery at Mercy hospital, Pittsfield. Then he carried out two others only to find that they already were dead.

Signaling for help by firing three shots from his revolver, Sergeant Lee walked bravely through quarters of a mile through dense underbrush to the nearest roadway, and directed state police back to the scene of the wreck.

He was taken later to St. Luke's hospital in Pittsfield, where he was given a "50-50" chance for recovery.

The Army said that an investigation was under way.

2d War Budget Started; May Top 90 Billions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP)

Work has started on the second war budget of the United States and informed fiscal officials guessed that it might exceed $90,000,000,000.

The budget bureau already has sent notices to all governmental agencies asking them how much money they think they will need for the fiscal year which will begin July 1, 1943.

Hearings will start in September, the bureau will help President Roosevelt revise the requests in December, and he will transmit the budget to congress in January.

Barring an unexpected early peace, officials are sure only that the budget will be the largest in the history of any nation on earth. The current year's spending, estimated by the budget bureau at $77,000,000,000.

Treasury spending now is at the rate of $5,000,000,000 a month. By winter it is expected to reach a steady rate of nearly $8,000,000,000 a month.

Sunnyside's Jail Goes to Scrap Pile

Georgia convicts soon may be called upon to do one task that, no doubt, they will thoroughly enjoy doing.

The jail at Sunnyside, enterprising community town on the old Macon highway, near Griffin, is to be torn down, and the steel bars and other metal in the jail are to go to the giant scrap heap now piling up in the park in the center of Griffin.

The jail probably will be destroyed by Spalding county convicts, many of whom at some time or another were housed in it.

Officials of Sunnyside recently contributed the jail to the Spalding county salvage committee, headed by W. O. Patterson.

If Hitler, Hirohito and associates could see the pile of scrap iron, they would develop the heebie jeebies, for the committee already has collected over 700,000 pounds of scrap metal and has more than 1,000,000 pounds more in the field to be brought in.

Park Overflows. The giant pile overflows the beautiful little park, and an auxiliary pile has sprung up in a vacant lot directly across the street from the Griffin city hall.

Wednesday has been officially designated by the Griffin committee as Farm Scrap Salvage Day, and trucks, loaned by the county, businessmen and manufacturers, will visit every farm in the county that day to collect old scrap.

In the pile are old automobiles, tractors, concrete mixers, discarded

Jinnah Warns British Not To Seek Peace With Hindus

BOMBAY, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The leader of India's 80,000,000 Moslems, Mohammed Ali Jinnah declared today that if the British in seeking peace with the Hindu-dominated All-India Congress party sacrificed the Moslems' interests, he would end his "co-operation."

E. R. Partridge Dies; Overall Manufacturer

Businessman Was Active In Civic and Club Affairs Here.

E. R. Partridge, owner of E. R. Partridge, Inc., died early yesterday at his summer home at Myrtle Beach, S. C., after an illness of several months.

Born at Jonesboro, N. C., on June 25, 1886, he was a son of the late John Joseph and Betty Bradshaw Partridge. In 1908 he was married to Miss Alice Gogans, of Newberry, S. C.

He came to Atlanta in 1914 as manager of the Hamilton Carhart Overall Company. In 1916 he was sent to San Francisco to open a branch of the company. He returned to Atlanta a few years later and established the E. R. Partridge Company, manufacturers of Carhart overalls and Partridge uniforms.

Mr. Partridge, 56 years old, was prominent in Atlanta civic life. He was a steward and chairman of the finance committee of the Druid Hills Methodist church, a Shriner, member of the East Lake Country Club, and various other organizations.

His daughter, the late Dorothy Partridge, was a popular student at the North Avenue Presbyterian school.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Miss Lois Alice Partridge, of Atlanta; two sons, John J., of Atlanta, and Elbert R., Air Corps Training Detachment, Camden, S. C.; and a brother, W. B. Partridge, of Mt. Airy, N. C.

The body will be brought here today and funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

"We have gone far enough," said Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, which has remained aloof from Gandhi's passive resistance campaign since the immediate Indian independence.

"If the British now seek peace with the Congress, we would consider that a betrayal of the Moslems who have been holding out a helping hand to Britain," he added.

Would Risk Death.

Asked if he would tell the Moslems to "go to it" and resist any Hindu government the British might possibly set up, he declared: "I would do it even if the British shot me down. I would do it even if it meant my death. All I would have to do would be to give the word to my 80,000,000 followers."

The Moslems, a minority in the Indian population, have contributed a strongly disproportionate percentage to the army of more than 1,000,000 guarding against expected attack by the Japanese in next-door Burma.

Jinnah's remarks were made at a press conference in response to questions suggested by the possibility that the government might negotiate with the virtually outlawed Congress party leaders, notwithstanding that they are jailed or in custody.

Offered Co-operation.

Contrary to his usual custom, Jinnah wore a Mohammedan dhoti during the half-hour interview. He added a fancy occidental touch—dancing pumps and gray socks. He spoke with a dramatic flair, his brown eyes aglow in his thin brown face.

Jinnah described his position thus: As head of the Moslem League, he had offered at the outbreak of the war to co-operate with the British government. He has repeatedly given the same assurance.

But the Congress party, composed mostly of Hindu political elements, although it has a minority of Moslem representation, consistently has held back, he said. Consequently the British have been continually placating the Hindus with greater and greater offers of a share in the government. Each concession, he said, held greater possibilities of harm to the Moslem population.

Goes Into Conference. The Moslem party leader spoke in his private study in his mansion on Bombay's exclusive Malabar Hills, and then went into conference with 21 members of his league's working committee.

Jinnah declared that the Moslem League, because it early had agreed to co-operate in the war effort, had been shunted aside repeatedly.

The British repeatedly have said they would consider no agreement with Indians that did not hinge on the All-India Congress, he said. "If the Congress should be installed in power it would be the end of the Moslems in India," Jinnah has said repeatedly, and he repeated today that he would be glad to form a provisional government.

"Naturally it would be necessary to obtain the support of all groups, including the Congress," he said.

His meeting with his working committee suggested that he, too, might be considering action like that of Gandhi, which might also land him in confinement.

Jinnah Cabled

Plea From America

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—(P)—J. J. Singh, president of the India League of America and a former member of the All-India Congress Committee, today cabled an appeal to Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of the All-India Moslem League, to "create unity to defeat the Axis."

"This is an appeal from your countrymen abroad," the cable read. "Today's (Monday's) Moslem League meeting will go down in history. You can help to bring peace and freedom or bloodshed to India. Beg you to create unity to defeat the Axis."

The working committee of the Moslem League is scheduled to meet in Bombay tomorrow.

17 Treated for Wounds

At Grady at Weekend
Sholguns, knives, hammers, mallets, ice picks and pistols constituted assorted instruments which resulted in 17 Negroes receiving surgical treatment yesterday at Grady hospital.

Grady doctors, always prepared for a weekend rush of surgical cases, reported their activities heavier than usual.

Two Negroes, struck on the head with hammers, were admitted with skull fractures, while knife wounds and pistol wounds resulted in three others being admitted.

air battles were being fought along the erupting Russian front from the Caucasus to the front was seen in the official reports that during the week ending last Saturday the Germans lost 369 airplanes against 241 Soviet planes lost.

The Soviet communists again reported battles in areas southeast of Kletska, where the Germans have pushed through Russian lines to the Don river and are attempting to exploit their gains, and northeast of Kotelnikovsk, where regrouped German forces are struggling to force their way to Stalingrad from the southwest.

Nazi Gain Admitted. The war report acknowledged that the Germans had made a minor gain by driving a wedge into the advance defense positions of one infantry regiment on the Kletska front but countered with a report that an infantry unit fighting northeast of Kotelnikovsk repulsed several enemy attacks and then routed a Rumanian regiment.

In the Caucasus fighting flamed along a 200-mile front from Krasnodar to Mineralnye Vody. A further German gain deep in the Caucasus was acknowledged when the communists said Red soldiers fell back to new positions under the pressure of numerically superior enemy forces.

They continued fighting, however, the report added. Stalwart Mountain Defense. The Germans in the Caucasus face a stalwart Russian defense in mountain spurs rising from the Black Sea ports of Novorossiysk and Tuapse, but the main German thrust had turned eastward toward the Caspian and the Gornzy oil field.

It was in that latter area the Soviets were forced again to give ground. Far to the north, in the Voronezh area, the Germans and Russians were fighting in the streets after the Nazis broke into a populated place, not identified, on the west bank of the Don river.

In other engagements in the Voronezh area, the midnight combat was reported.

"This is an appeal from your countrymen abroad," the cable read. "Today's (Monday's) Moslem League meeting will go down in history. You can help to bring peace and freedom or bloodshed to India. Beg you to create unity to defeat the Axis."

even an old farm dinner bell, whose glad tidings has brought weary farm hands running to the dinner table, is in the pile."

Largest Contributor. Probably the largest single contributor will be the Georgia Public Utilities Company, which has donated an old gas manufacturing plant. Officials have estimated there are more than 1,000,000 pounds of scrap in this plant, and one tank, discarded with the advent of natural gas, weighs 93,000 pounds.

Workmen soon will begin tearing out this old equipment in the old and practically abandoned gas plant.

Other large contributors are the Jones Construction Company, which gave concrete mixers, road scrapers and other road-building machinery; the Georgia-Kincaid Mills, which has shipped 83,000 pounds of scrap, and the Griffin branch of the Thomson Cotton Mills, which has shipped 60,000 pounds.

Money from the sale of the scrap will be turned over to the USO, Patterson added.

unique said, the Russians threw back German attempts to regain defense lines lost in earlier fighting.

Reds in Northern Drives.

On the northern sections of the winding Caucasus-to-Baltic front the Russians continued to drive forward in counterattacks, reporting considerable success.

The enemy was forced out of a populated place near Bryansk, southwest of Moscow, and in the Voronezh zone the Soviet information bureau stated simply, "Our troops advanced, killing about 1,200 Germans."

Important heights were reported captured, and a forest retaken which the Germans had won in a counterattack.

In the battle for Stalingrad the Germans were employing new smashing tactics, coupling masses of self-propelled artillery with tanks and motorized infantry to break the Soviet lines. But Marshal Semeon Timoshenko had by now massed artillery, the Red army's "god of war," which smashed the Nazi machine to a standstill before Moscow last autumn, to oppose the enemy. A holocaust was in the making.

Break-Through Reported. The battle for Stalingrad days ago that the battle of the Don bend was concluded, the German high command today said its forces in the northeastern loop of the bend "broke through enemy positions, and penetrated to the Don." Rearguard resistance in the Caucasus was broken, it declared, and German troops were "pressing forward in a continuous advance."

(The Russians were said to be attacking southeast of Lake Ilmen and on the Volkhov, below Leningrad, and at Vyazma and Rzhev, west of Moscow, where 71 Red army tanks were declared to have been destroyed. The Germans claimed success in local counterattacks at Voronezh.)

Bringing to bear superior numbers in the Don bend, German Marshal Fedor von Bock swung the battle from south of Kletska to the southeast of that Cossack town but the Russians still were holding within the bulge of the river.

The Russians were still fighting at Krasnodar and Maikop in the western Caucasus, although the Germans claimed a week ago to have captured these places, and Russian dispatches said their defense was strengthening in the Krasnodar sector especially.

German pontoon bridges flung across the Kuban river which protects Novorossiysk were being destroyed as fast as they were built, the Soviets said, and one detachment of 150 German automatic riflemen which got across two days ago was wiped out.

Maze of Natural Barriers. The battlefield at Krasnodar afforded a maze of natural barriers, including streams, heights and ravines and the Russians were taking the utmost advantage of these defenses, but von Bock's men were continuing to probe for weak spots.

A comparative lull had set in on the Kotelnikovsk battlefield on the southwestern approaches to Stalingrad. Red Star said von Bock's forces had been blocked in that area 95 miles from Stalingrad and had generally gone on the defensive, endeavoring to erect blockhouses and prepare minefields. The Germans had been bled white by mauling Russian counterattacks, the Soviets said. Hills which were recaptured by the Russians remained the scene of struggle with the Red Army holding the crests and mounds of German dead littering the lower slopes.

Indicating virtual stabilization of this front, Red Star described an attack by a single German battalion which was blocked by Red Army artillery concealed in a ravine after a protracted struggle.

One indication of the drain on German manpower was given by a German prisoner who was quoted as saying the 71st Motorized Infantry Division lost as much as 50 per cent of its men and material. Much of German difficulty all along the front was springing from attacks of the Soviet air force. Tass, official news agency, said the Red air fleet in the last fortnight had destroyed 660 tanks, 3,150 trucks, 55 ammunition dumps and dispersed and partially annihilated 45 infantry battalions and several cavalry squadrons in mass raids along communication lines.

British Win Control Of Air To Deliver Supplies to Malta

CAIRO, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's North African supply ports were heavily pounded last night by the RAF, while in other operations over the Mediterranean an Axis ship was reported hit and some power lighters attacked.

The raids were announced shortly after RAF spokesmen declared remarkable co-operation between air and sea forces last week had enabled the furiously-bombing British to deliver vital supplies to Malta.

The operations against the ports of entry began at dusk last night. Light bombers visited Matruh, while heavies and mediums attacked Tobruk, scoring hits on shipping and starting fires among the gasoline stores. Salum was attacked on the return journey.

Antiaircraft Guides Bombs. The ship reported hit in the Mediterranean was bombed by a plane which sighted on the target by closely watching flashes from antiaircraft guns. A mushroom-like fire shot up into the sky a moment after the downward swish of the British bombs.

The attack on the lighters was made by an Australian light bomber squadron which has been harassing lighters creeping along the coast. The Aussies now claim 17 sunk in recent attacks, with two more presumed to be lost in today's raid.

RAF spokesmen, speaking of the attack on the convoy, said that as the ships entered "Bomb Alley"—the narrow sea passage between Sicily and Tunisia—British fighters took off from island bases in continuing patrols over the supply-laden merchant ships from dawn to dusk.

After Thursday when the main body of ships reached port, British fighters shot down seven enemy planes which were making frantic efforts to destroy the supplies. The RAF spokesman said the fighters' success could be measured also by the number of bombs which intercepted enemy planes were obliged to jettison harmlessly into the sea.

Six more enemy bombers were shot down into the sea later, bringing the score to 13.

The RAF said Spitfires had won local air superiority over Malta during the last few weeks and enabled the convoy to make the last stage, comparatively free of damage.

Malta went through today and last night without an air raid—the first consecutive day and night of calm since February 19.

The convoy was accompanied by a formidable show of British warships—including battleships, carriers, cruisers and destroyers. The British have admitted on the loss of the carrier Emden and the cruise ship Manchester, despite Axis claims of sinking or damaging upwards of 20 ships.

Supplying Malta, a painful thorn on the flank of the Axis supply route to Egypt, was a vital matter in the battle of the seas. The land forces of General Sir Claude Auchinleck and Marshal Erwin Rommel remained quiet except for patrol activities, a headquarters communiqué said. RAF planes attacked targets in the harbor of Alexandria and the cruise ship Manchester, despite Axis claims of sinking or damaging upwards of 20 ships.

Miss Herlihy Faces Arizona Murder Charge

Prosecutor Says Colonel's Daughter To Be Held As Slayer.

A murder charge will be filed against Miss Margaret Herlihy, formerly of Atlanta, in connection with the fatal shooting Saturday night of her fiancé, Captain D. D. Carr, it was disclosed yesterday in an Associated Press dispatch from Douglas, Ariz.

Deputy County Attorney Norman Herring said he planned to file the murder charge, the dispatch stated.

Lieutenant Colonel E. G. (Pat) Herlihy, father of the pretty, red-haired girl, was stationed in Atlanta in 1938 as an instructor in the officers' reserves, and Miss Herlihy was known in social circles in this city.

Carr died less than 24 hours after, Police Chief Percy Bowden reported. He was shot twice, in the Herlihy home. Miss Herlihy was charged with assault with a deadly weapon a few hours before his death, but Herring said the complaint would be changed to murder, probably today.

Colonel Herlihy, infantry commander at Fort Huachuca, issued a statement in which he said he found marks of a beating on his daughter and that "I am convinced she was fighting for her life" against Carr.

Carr, 27, attached to an anti-tank division at Fort Huachuca, and Miss Herlihy, who were to have been married September 15, had been to Agua Prieta, a Mexican resort across the river, preceding the shooting.

"Carr apparently resented the fact we planned to take Margaret with us to Fort Benning, where I have been transferred," Colonel Herlihy said.

"We had always opposed this engagement but did not interfere as our daughter was over 21 years old and we thought things would work out."

A new retailer will be allowed an initial inventory of one pound of sugar for each $1 of gross sales he estimates will be made during the first week of his operations. His estimated gross sales must include all commodities, including meats, groceries, fruits, and vegetables.

To new wholesaler, the permitted inventory will be the customary minimum shipping unit in which sugar is delivered to wholesalers in his territory, plus the amount of sugar the wholesaler himself estimates he will sell during the first two calendar weeks he is in business.

New Firms Get Sugar Inventories

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration announced today a uniform method of establishing authorized sugar inventories for wholesale and retail businesses which have opened up since rationing began last April 28.

A new retailer will be allowed an initial inventory of one pound of sugar for each $1 of gross sales he estimates will be made during the first week of his operations. His estimated gross sales must include all commodities, including meats, groceries, fruits, and vegetables.

To new wholesaler, the permitted inventory will be the customary minimum shipping unit in which sugar is delivered to wholesalers in his territory, plus the amount of sugar the wholesaler himself estimates he will sell during the first two calendar weeks he is in business.

Misrepresentation Laid To Talmadge in Attack on Caldwell

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 16.—(AP)—The board of managers of the University of Georgia Alumni Association today described as "totally unfounded and a misrepresentation of the true facts" any charge that the university president, Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, advocated racial co-education.

Widely Known Contractor of Columbus Dies

Murphey Pound, 49, Served as Pilot in World War I.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Aug. 16.—(AP)—Murphey Pound, 49, prominent contractor and a pilot in the Air Corps during the first World War, died at his home here today following an illness of two weeks.

Pound, son of the late Dr. Jere M. Pound, who for many years was a leader in the educational life of the state, and Ada Murphey Pound, was a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology in the class of 1914. While at Tech, he was active as an athlete and was captain of the baseball team in his senior year. He was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

In 1917 Pound volunteered in World War I and was assigned to the Air Corps. He was commissioned a lieutenant and became one of the early pilots in the United States Army. After receiving his commission, he served as an instructor at several Army air fields.

Pound came to Columbus in 1930 and for 12 years was prominent in the business and social life of the city. He was engaged in the general contracting business, and since establishing himself in Columbus had constructed many building projects here, at Fort Benning and throughout the southeast.

Surviving are: His wife, Mrs. Eva Garrett Pound; two sons, Murphey Pound Jr., a student at the University of Georgia, and Jere M. Pound; a daughter, Eva Garrett Pound; his mother, Mrs. Jere M. Pound, of Athens; two sisters, Mrs. Russell Edwards, Fort Valley, and Mrs. Tryon Huggins, Athens; three brothers, Merritt B. Pound, Athens; E. A. Pound, Columbus, and Lieutenant W. S. Pound, United States Army.

Solomon Initiative 'Well To Emulate'

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—The weekly Reynolds News said today that the United States attack on the Solomon Islands "may free America's communications and even the island of New Guinea from India and Siberia and punch a hole in the steel net in which Axis submarines seek to imprison Allied sea power."

"This is an example of initiative we might do well to emulate nearer home," the newspaper added. "It is an example of the kind of action which alone can win this war."

Marines Tighten Solomons Grip

Islands often end in rocky headlands of volcanic rock that afford little beach footing. The interior of most of the islands is cut by deep ravines, and the natives often have engaged in head hunting.

Channels Dangerous.

The poorly charted surrounding channels in which naval supporting forces operate are dangerous because of swift currents in which sharks abound, and the numerous barrier reefs and coral atolls.

While General Douglas MacArthur's airmen maintained unceasing aerial watch over the waters and islands to the northeast of Australia, his bombers carried the attack to Japanese-held Timor in the north-west.

Allied bombers in the Timor area in recent days were largely concentrated on enemy shipping but the raid reported in today's communique found targets among Japanese shore and troops establishments.

Observers believed the object was to forestall a possible Japanese attempt to use Timor as a base for diversionary sorties southward and to aid killed and forces which have been continuing organized guerrilla resistance in the interior six months after Japanese occupation of the island's principal centers.

Kokoda Action Continues. Reinforced Japanese forces half-way across New Guinea to the Allied forward base of Port Moresby increased their pressure against Australian and United States positions near Kokoda today after losing 150 men to an Aussie assault unit in a five-day running fight.

The action was 850 miles north-west of the Solomon Islands where Marines under the command of Vice Admiral Robert Lee Gormley were conducting the first United States offensive of the war, and apparently was not directly related to that fight.

The towering Owen Stanley mountains still stand between the Japanese, based on the Buna-Gona beachhead, and Port Moresby.

While Allied troops kept a wary eye on the enemy's inland incursion of New Guinea, medium bombers attacked the Japanese-held island of Timor, 1,600 miles to the west, with success. Enemy troops, buildings, roads, transportation and other installations were the targets, a communique said.

"Direct Hits Made." "Direct hits were made on buildings and fires were started in the area," the communique added, "the enemy intercepted one flight without success."

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters said the Japanese recently had reinforced their troops in the threat to Port Moresby, which lies 350 miles east of Cape York on the Australian mainland. Originally, 1,500 to 2,500 Japanese were landed in the Buna-Gona area.

The Australian commander of the assault unit which fought its way back to the main Allied forces on the northern slopes of the mountains reported his men "got more than 150 Japs" in the jungle clashes with the reinforced Japanese vainly trying to encircle them.

With a frontal assault, the Aussies on August 9 dislodged the Japanese from the tiny cluster of grass huts which is Kokoda. The Japanese soon counterattacked with a larger force. The Australians held off the encircling enemy with grenades and machineguns throughout an entire day and crept to safety through the Japanese lines after inflicting maximum damage to the enemy's men and equipment, the commander reported.

The unit then started a wide skirting movement through the jungles and reached their main force three days later, just in time to help beat off a renewed Japanese attack at close range in drenching rain and dense fog. The Australians held the attackers for a day but withdrew to their original positions when the enemy brought up hard-hitting reinforcements.

The headquarters spokesman said the small Japanese convoy which was attacked Friday and Saturday off New Guinea apparently had been dispersed. The ships apparently had started toward the Solomons to reinforce the hard-pressed enemy garrisons.

Japs Launch Counterdrive Against Huwan

Bitter Fighting Rages As Invader Gets 3,000 Fresh Troops.

CHUNGKING, Aug. 16.—(AP)—Japanese have launched a counter-attack at Linchuan and Huwan, 12 miles to the southeast, after receiving 3,000 reinforcements, and bitter fighting is raging in that part of Kiangsi province, the Chinese high command said today.

Since early July when the Japanese attempted a westward invasion of Hunan province from Linchuan and were bloodily repulsed along the Kan river, the Chinese have been strongly attacking Linchuan and a few days ago reported their troops in the outskirts of the town. At one time the Chinese recaptured Hunan but were forced to withdraw.

The Japanese also were said to be counterattacking in the hilly region northwest of Linchuan. Chinese said they had seized a large quantity of supplies in continued attacks on a defeated Japanese force southeast of Tsingtien in Chukchiang province.

Tsingtien is about 25 miles northwest of the Port of Wenchow and about the same distance south-east of Lishui (Chuchow), an air base.

Observers on the coast heard heavy and light gunfire for some time and fast motorcraft were heard maneuvering well out in the channel.

German long-range guns on the French coast suddenly opened up with rapid bombardment in which at least half-dozen shells were sent screaming across the straits in the first salvo.

Jap Losses Said 5 Times Over U. S.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 16.—(AP) Admiral Arthur J. Heppburn, recently named chairman of the Navy's general board, said here today that Japanese Navy losses since the start of the war had been possibly five times as great as those of the United States, even including Pearl Harbor.

"Their losses in tonnage have been several times over, perhaps as great as five times as much," said the admiral, here on a tour of Naval establishments. "That includes Pearl Harbor. Most of the damage done there has been repaired."

"And one thing you want to remember, is that we are very conservative in our claims. When we say a ship is sunk, she's sunk."

U. S. Army Fighters Join Canadians in Raid on France

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(AP)—United States Army fighters, flying wing to wing with a Canadian squadron, made a long sweep over France in the past 24 hours, a communique announced today.

With the RAF they also participated in convoy patrols and in interception sorties.

The United States communique, the fourth to be issued from the European theater of operations, offered no details of the varied activities of the Americans and other sources declined to amplify the bald announcement.

The names of Americans who flew and first person accounts as well were withheld, but it was disclosed that United States officers are organizing a background news service probably similar to the British air ministry news service which amplifies communications with interesting detail and names of fliers.

British sources described the operations as routine and the RAF had nothing to say on the part of the British and the Canadians in the sweep.

The sweep, pilots, who after nearly three years of war knew the air over France as well as over their own airdromes and who are wise to the tricks of the Luftwaffe, apparently kept close to the Americans. The sweep was something in the nature of an educational flight in preparation for the day when all-American units will strike independent blows at the Axis.

Last night British bombers renewed their attacks on western Germany. The force was of moderate size. Five bombers were missing after the raids during which one German fighter was shot down.

A Berlin broadcast said four bombers were shot down and casualties had been suffered by civilians. Nazi raiders were active in coastal district of East Anglia and northwest England Saturday night and dropped bombs at three points. No casualties were reported.

Services Held For Victims of Boiler Blast

Miss Lucille Nash, Otis W. Kemp Killed Friday at Snellville.

Funeral services were held yesterday for a woman and a man who were killed Friday when a boiler exploded in a small building housing a canning project at Snellville.

The victims were Miss Lucille Nash, who was instantly killed, and Otis William (Bud) Kemp, who died several hours after the blast, in Emory University hospital.

Rites for Miss Nash were held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Friendship Baptist church, Gwinnett county, with the Rev. Sammy Bryant officiating.

Miss Nash is survived by two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Webb and Miss Myrtice Nash, and four brothers, W. P. H. J. C. E. and J. T. Nash. Services for Kemp were held yesterday morning at Snellville with the Rev. Andrew Johnson officiating. He is survived by his wife, four children, Imogene, Peggy, Bobby and W. T. Kemp; his mother, Mrs. W. S. Kemp; a sister, Mrs. H. E. Buchanan, and a brother, J. G. Kemp.

17 Killed in Transport Crash

gation of the crash, which occurred at 9:30 p. m., already was under way, and that a crew from Westover Field was at work recovering the bodies, some of which already had been brought out.

The plane was on a routine mission out of Pope Field, Fort Bragg, N. C., the Army said, and left Mitchell Field early last evening.

Plunges Into Trees.

Peru's civilian defense aircraft observation units first sighted the big craft as it plunged down among the pine trees, 16 miles east of Pittsfield, and notified state police. Then, by firing shots in answer to the shots from Sergeant Lee's gun, they closed in on the survivor and finally found him.

Except for the loss of the airship Akron on April 4, 1933, in which 73 men died, last night's crash was one of the most serious in the history of United States military aviation, either Army or Navy. Other major disasters included the crash of an airliner at Premier, W. Va., in which 21 soldiers were killed July 1, the loss of a Navy blimp off New Jersey on June 9, 1942, in which 12 men were killed, the crash of an Army plane near Denver August 23, 1940, in which nine men died, and the destruction of a naval transport plane near San Diego January 5, 1941, in which 11 lost their lives.

Rescue attempts by citizens of Peru, augmented by soldiers, doctors, nurses, woodsmen and other volunteers, were made under the most difficult conditions.

Battling darkness that made their task "like walking in an inkpot," they were aided only by the

3 Bodies Taken From Bomber Crash

LORAIN, Tex., Aug. 16.—(AP) An Army bombing plane crashed and burned in a cotton field 10 miles north of Lorain today and Army authorities removed three bodies from the wreckage.

Mrs. Arnold Haygood, who saw the crash, said the plane burst into flames as it struck the ground.

The said pieces of the ship began falling from it before it crashed. The tail of the craft was found about one-half mile from the main wreckage.

The dead were not identified immediately.

Unsung Heroes

There is one branch of the United States Navy which has, probably, wreaked more destruction and damage upon enemy forces than any other, in proportion to its size and the number of men engaged. Yet it is true that this branch has probably received less acclaim and recognition of its heroism than any other.

These comparatively unsung heroes are the men who man the submarines. By the very nature of their operations, by the necessities of strategy, their exploits are, more often than not, known only to a few of their fellows.

Nevertheless, merely by compiling the figures from laconic naval communiqués, it is possible to gain an idea of what the underwater warships have done. Figures covering the period from December 7 to mid-July reveal that American submarines have sunk at least 25 per cent of those Japanese ships which have been sent to the bottom. They are credited with sinking 12 Japanese destroyers and damaging two; sinking two cruisers and damaging seven; destroying one aircraft carrier, six tankers, 36 auxiliary and cargo ships and damaging eleven of this class and have put one big Japanese submarine out of commission.

It must be remembered, too, that many of the enemy vessels listed merely as damaged were, probably, sunk. For a submarine counts as sunk only those it actually sees go down. If a submarine commander sees his torpedo strike home on the target, but is forced to submerge his own vessel before the enemy ship sinks, he counts it only as a "damage."

We hear much of the heroism of the men in the aviation branch of the service. We read of individual exploits of great bravery by men of the Army and of the surface Navy. Full honor and acclaim should always be given to these.

But, while we cheer for others, let us sometimes remember the men who man the "pig boats" who serve under greater hardship and whose achievements are frequently just as great, even though unpublicized.

The case of the six saboteurs has brought the war home to one and all. Later on, perhaps, the fuel oil scarcity will bring Valley Forge into the parlor.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

Chance To Serve

Thousands of Georgians barred from active service in the armed forces because of age or physical condition will welcome the opportunity for service offered by the Coast Guard in beach patrol and coastal lookout duty.

Civilian defense committees have been requested to aid in the enlistment of men who by their voluntary service will release others for sea duty.

The beach patrol is one of the most important functions of the Coast Guard today, especially in the light of known saboteur landings. The training and organization of the eight who were caught well indicates that many more will attempt landings for the purpose of destroying war plants and civilian morale. The coast line is in reality a front line today.

Those who can serve will be in the thick of a fight.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

If he reads the papers, Cy Young is now chucking a few to loosen the ancient arm. In worried Washington, they've beckoned Barney Baruch in from the bullpen.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

Battalion, at Least

The United States Marines are undershooting their mark when they announce plans for the enlistment of a "Cracker Platoon" from this section of Georgia.

The response will be better than a mere platoon from the fighting youth of the Atlanta section. It will be a "Cracker Company" or two, especially after the news from the Solomons, where the smashing might of the Marine Corps gave the Japanese a foretaste of what is to come.

But the Marines come to the right place for men—a fighting corps has always been popular with a fighting people.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

Air Supremacy

Colonel John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, a graduate of West Point and a man with a quarter century of practical experience in all branches of the industry, brings reassurance to America in his assertion that the United Nations not only are producing planes of superior fighting quality to the Axis, but are producing more than the enemy.

This superiority both in quality and quantity should increase as the war progresses, says Colonel Jouett.

There have been a number of uncomplicated comparisons of our planes with the Japanese Zero fighters. Yet, as Colonel Jouett points out, our air forces have inflicted more than double the number of losses than they have suffered in combats with the Zeros. They have done almost as well in bomber defense against Zero attacks.

The new German fighter plane, the Focke-Wulf 190, has proven a tough antagonist for the British Spitfires, but can scarcely be called a better plane than the new British or American fighter models.

The answer is to be found in the combat results all around the world. And, at least in recent months, those results show strongly in favor of the air forces of the United States.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

Plentiful Power

A glimpse at the electric power record so far this year indicates that nature seems to be very much on the side of the United Nations. Last year, it will be recalled, the weather was definitely against the domestic war effort. The cry was "save electricity," due to power shortages caused by lack of rainfall.

Now the situation is completely changed. Abundant rainfall has meant weekly production of electric power marking a gain of approximately 18 per cent over the same period last year. The TVA now lends power, where a year ago it was forced to borrow from neighboring areas. The northwest, severely hit by drought last summer, also has plenty of water for operation of the hydro-plants.

Not only from the power standpoint, but from the entire war effort viewpoint, the fact that the rains came means benefit to the nation. There have been record crops of food, fiber and oil. Another factor is that rivers have been navigable, requiring less moving of coal for steam plants. It is something about which to be truly thankful.

—UNITED WE FIGHT!—

Public Approval

Leon Henderson must have walked briskly into his office for the first time, probably, in many weeks. Probably, he arrived with his head thrown in the air a little, chest swelled out and smile on his face. For the Price Administrator had just been given a vote of confidence by the American people.

Fifty-four per cent of a group polled by Gallup said they thought Henderson is doing a good job, even favored giving him more power.

Placed in what he thought was a position that would make him the most unpopular man in the country after the war, Henderson had reason to strut.

It's a tough job that hits every American pocketbook, that denies Americans many of the things they want. It's a tough job that fixes price ceilings, and handles the delicate gasoline rationing program. It's a tough job for a man to have to tell another how much he can charge for rent and then back it up with authority.

So it would be no wonder if Mr. Henderson has a spring in his stride. Judging from the results of the survey, he has little to worry about, for the present at least.

It's nice to know the public feels that way about him. It will make his job easier—and he's got a tough one.

Georgia Editors Say:

A FAKE DICTATOR
(From The Vidalia Advance.)

Ellis Arnall will be elected Governor of Georgia this year. He should be elected, because he is able, fearless, competent and honest. His opponent should be defeated, because he has made a bad Governor.

For that reason, it is annoying to hear some of Mr. Arnall's supporters refer to Mr. Talmadge as a dictator. A dictator is a bad man, but a dictator also is a big man.

It doubtless will wound Mr. Talmadge's feeling of self-importance, but he bears no resemblance to Nero or Napoleon, Caesar or Hitler. He enjoys being told that he does, just like any spoiled brat enjoys being told that the bad man will get him if he doesn't mend his ways. But he is not a dictator except in the way that a spoiled brat is a dictator in the home, and if Mama Georgia would spank him and send him off to play with something less valuable and breakable than the machinery of government it would serve him right.

You remember when "Little Gene" got peeved because President Roosevelt did not pay him enough attention and started calling the President names, for all the world like a nasty-minded little boy that gets mad with teacher and writes dirty words on the side of the fence.

Or take the case of the University System, which he thought of as a personal toy. It didn't run to suit him, so he threw it down on the sidewalk, stamped on it and then nearly had hysterics because it wouldn't run any more.

Georgians do not need to be scared of "Little Gene." He is no dictator; he is just a spoiled boy dressed up in man's clothes with some red suspenders, playing at being a dictator. But it is imperative to get rid of him as Governor, because this is no time to be led by a naughty child that screams and sticks out his tongue in public and disgraces us in front of the neighbors.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

NAZIS GROW NERVOUS WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—There are increasing signs that the Nazis fear the opening of a second front in Europe is imminent. In the beginning their propaganda relied on ridicule to assure the people that no such offensive could take place. More recently they have begun to change their tune. Now they are publicly proclaiming that fortifications along the coastal area are such that no Allied general would dare attempt to break them.

Defense works erected in France, they say, are "the most powerful of all time." In France, they add, the German army numbers 25 divisions of the highest quality. Claims are being publicly made that a tremendous number of camouflaged airdromes have been constructed there, completely inaccessible to an invading force; that there is no shortage of planes, as the Nazi air force has made manifest in North Africa; that the waters around German-occupied territory are completely controlled by U-boat submarines and that the German anti-aircraft guns have proved their excellence.

Summing up these claims, the Nazis say their defensive preparations are such that there can be no need for moving men and equipment from the Russian frontier to bolster up their home forces.

VICHY JOINS CHORUS Doubtlessly taking its orders from the Nazi-controlled Vichy government, the French embassy in Washington has opened a collateral campaign of its own against a second front. Officials of the embassy are arguing that it would only bring suffering to the French people. They try to prove their point by telling of the British commando raids, which resulted in the Germans ordering the execution of a number of Frenchmen suspected of aiding the raiders.

All of these outpourings are regarded in the same light as a small boy whistling while passing a cemetery at night. The Nazis know what is coming and are merely putting up a false front. They are afraid in Norway, one of their most vulnerable points. Extra precautions are being taken along the coastline there in the knowledge that if we succeed in establishing a foothold in that region we have insured the safety of unlimited supplies moving to Russia along the northern route.

The Nazis are afraid of an invasion attempt in Holland, which would have the advantage of flanking the old Maginot Line and the German Rhine fortifications. They are not sure we may not strike in Italy or in Spain.

BEGINNING TO HAUNT All of the evidence is that they no longer consider the opening of a second front in Europe as impossible. They now face it as a serious probability which may come at any moment. It is beginning to haunt their fears.

Most military men regard this as the chief reason why operations on the far-flung Russian front haven't been more extensive since the summer fighting started again. The active battle area has been confined to the approaches to the Caucasus. No effort has been made to renew the drive on Moscow.

The entire German striking force is not represented in the great armies being hurled at the Caucasus. Others have been left behind to defend the locked gates of Europe. What the Nazi propaganda agency says about 25 divisions being in France to meet an invasion attempt is probably true. They are merely hoping that we will be impressed by the figures and give up the attempt.

Hitler's main hope is to destroy Russia before we and the British are ready to engage him on the western front. If he cannot do this by force of arms he may offer a tempting peace proposal to the Russians when winter comes. Anything to get the Soviet army out of the way before we open up on him.

OUR FIRST JOB But nothing is likely to swerve us from our purpose to lay down a huge invading army at the first moment we are prepared to strike. President Roosevelt has already identified our main program in the war: To get rid of Hitler and Nazism first before concentrating our main attention on the treacherous Japs. If we defeated the Japs first we would still have Hitler on our hands. The war had already been in progress for two years before the Japs came in.

Hitler's fears of a second front must have been intensified by the announcement made in London this week by Major General Carl Spaatz, commander of American air forces in the United Kingdom. He announced that "within the immediate future" the American planes under his command will join with the British in combined operations against Germany.

This means that after much careful preparation we are finally ready to strike the long-awaited offensive blow. For six months and more we have been building up reserves in England. Our planes and pilots are quartered all over the islands.

GERMANY WILL KNOW When the air offensive is struck we may look for a constant repetition of the giant 1,000-plane raids which the British have been conducting intermittently for the past several months. Germany will realize we are in the war then.

The all-out air attack on Germany will come when we put our forces into the air with the British. General Spaatz says that is something to be expected "within the immediate future." It may be the prelude to the second front. The invasion attempt may be put off until 1943. No one outside of the Allied high command knows.

Hitler knows it is coming sooner or later. His fears are betrayed by the latest protestations of his propaganda ministry.

The Ugly Head Of Jealousy.

We all know, or should know, that it is necessary for certain individuals to be granted a priority status so they can buy a new car.

But we do wonder when passing some of the costly new models we occasionally see.

Of course it is pretty safe to presume that the new cars were secured quite legitimately. That there was real emergency need for them. That their owners were scrupulously honest in the arguments they made to the priority authorities. That there was not one iota of misrepresentation.

However, if we were a judge on the bench—which we never will, no desire, to become some vanguard who had slashed the tires or otherwise put out of commission one of these affairs, we'd be inclined to be mighty merciful under one condition.

That is, if the defendant could show that the owner of the damaged car had cheated in securing permit to buy it. Under such circumstances, we'd be inclined to go and sin no more and then turn the stern judicial eye, with an omnibus in the background, upon the said owner of said car.

A Dream Of Food.

For several days, in that hospital, they had been bringing me excellent, but undesired food. Trays of beautifully prepared, well-cooked dishes, but viands that made absolutely no appeal to my appetite. I was getting to the point where I dreaded the coming of meal times.

Then, one night, I had a dream. I dreamed I was a boy again at home and was in the midst of some mild childhood ailment. And my mother was trying to tempt my appetite.

In my dream I saw her bringing easily digested and tempting foods that were just what I wanted. Soups and jellies and custards and so on.

Next morning, when my nurse arrived, I remembered the dream. I told her to sit down while I told her something. And I laid out a menu of the very dishes my mother used to bring to my boyhood sickroom, for all three meals that day. And she just repeated the second day.

And I began to get better from that day on. Until the day came when a couple of doctors debated whether

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Letter to Governor Lehman, Albany, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

I am told that the state attorney general has no authority, no power of initiative, to supersede a county prosecutor without orders from you and that, therefore, Attorney General John Bennett, Mr. Farley's non-New Deal candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, is unable to start anything in the case of Joe Fay, the pluggily union racketeer of the AFL, and H. Orville Warner, of Rochester, his union subordinate whom he booted around a hotel corridor in Syracuse last fall. The assault took place during the solemn deliberation of the state convention of the AFL and Warner was put in the hospital with cracked sinuses and other injuries. This was only the most recent of many thuggish assaults by this vicious slugging Fay, a very dangerous man.

Witness Missing Fay was indicted on a charge of assault—good for a maximum of five years in prison—but when the case came on for trial in Syracuse last winter Warner was missing and after a brief continuance the district attorney agreed to a dismissal of the indictment and the court discharged Fay. Soon afterward Warner came out of hiding and Fay reinstated him in his union job.

The appearances of conspiracy in this case are so suggestive that it obviously calls for special attention from the law department of the state. It was not necessary for the prosecutor to agree to such a dismissal. It could have been kept on file for years and years. The court did not have to permit the dismissal, and could have refused it. Justice plainly was made a fool of.

Union Racketeer

Fay is a notorious union racketeer of one of the most disgraceful unions of the AFL, a union which has been down worked for its considerable sums of money in the war construction program. He is also an influential New Jersey politician, currently, as during the third-term campaign, has been serving the New Deal party with all its corrupt power. He recently brought in a union endorsement of Senator Smathers of the Hague machine and he is not only a unioner of great power but a contractor on big construction projects which, nowadays, are confined to war jobs. He is not only international vice president of the Hoisting Engineers' Union but president of a big Jersey construction company whose heavy duty vehicles may be seen dashing around on war construction work. The president of his Newark local is also an officer of this company.

Needs Only Letter

I am told that, notwithstanding the notoriety of the Fay-Warner case in Syracuse, it might not have been brought to your official attention, but that it takes only a letter to you to do this. Thereupon, as lawyers have explained the matter to me, you would have a right, indeed, I understand, a public duty, to refer the case to Mr. Bennett, the attorney general, under a special order to make a thorough investigation.

For this reason, I am taking this means of calling the case to your official attention. You may not happen to read this letter in any paper in which it appears, but I am sure more than one of our citizens will send it to you: Registered mail, return receipt requested, so that you will not fail to become aware of the situation.

Of course, conspiracy is very hard to prove, but that is no excuse for a failure to make an effort to prove one in a case so suggestive as this one. I am prepared to present to you a letter from Warner to me, written while he was in the hospital and before he went into hiding, in which Warner offered to give me information against Fay. And, no doubt the grand jury testimony by Warner, which caused the indictment, would bear on the case.

Dismissal Unnecessary

It is certainly to be kept in mind that it was not necessary to permit the dismissal of the indictment. And its dismissal was a priceless benefit to Fay, the rich man, because he cannot be reindicted on the same set of facts unless a conspiracy should be proved first. However, if a conspiracy should be proved, all affected by the evidence of a conspiracy could be indicted on that charge and Fay could be reindicted on the assault charge and, this time, made to stand trial. In such case, if Warner failed to repeat in a trial the same testimony that he gave before the grand jury he could be indicted again on a charge of perjury.

Warner couldn't run very far or hide very effectively a second time. For that matter, it is a poor comment on the police authority of New York state that he was allowed to hide out the first time, because, nowadays, with the draft and other registrations, it is much easier than it is in normal times to pick up a man in hiding.

As a conscientious public official you will, I am sure, be glad to have this matter brought to your attention. Don't bother to answer me. Your action or inaction will be your answer to the people.

Yours very truly,
WESTBROOK PEGLER.

I could safely be removed home. One was inclined to keep me in hospital a week or two longer. But the other was my champion and said he thought I'd be just as well off at home.

Murmured, from my bed, "home cooking" in the proper, appealing tone, and won the argument. Was carried home that day.

Hospital food is undoubtedly excellent—but it is neither the food remembered from boyhood nor the food of home today.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL

ROMULUS, REMUS AND SCRAP In "Georgia," of the American Guide Series, it says, on page 445, describing Tour 10, through Rome:

"In front of the Municipal Auditorium, Broad St., at 6th Ave., one block L. of the highway, is the CAPITOLINE WOLF, a bronze reproduction of the famous Roman statue showing the wolf suckling Romulus and Remus. It was presented by Premier Benito Mussolini when the Georgia city was selected as the site for a mill of the Tubize-Chatillon Corporation, an Italian company."

It is this bronze she-wolf, with the small figures of Romulus and Remus feeding at her, which might become a small international incident.

Shall the gift of Benito, the Bum, be thrown into the smelter and recast into a gun part or a vital ship's instrument, with which to help fight the unhappy soldiers of Benito, the Bum? Or shall it rest in peace in a cage against the day when Benito, the Bum, shall be overthrown and dignity returned to Italy and the Capitoline hill?

The ladies of Rome might answer up a loud, but lady-like "Yes!"

During the War Between the States the ladies of Columbus contributed their household brasses, which were cast into a cannon known as "The Ladies' Defender."

The brass of Benito, the Bum, is in storage. The verdict is up to the people of Rome.

AVERTED EYES The history back of the original Roman statue is quite in keeping with the modern spirit of Benito, the Bum. Plutarch reports that there was an argument between Remus and Romulus as to the location of the city. They decided to station themselves at vantage points and the one who saw the most vultures (buzzards to us), was to have the decision.

Remus made the mistake of calling out first. He saw six. Romulus counted with a shout of 12. This was determined to be a phony count and in the ensuing fight Remus was killed.

This spirit, including the double-crossing of one's brother, is a part of the creed of the modern fascist, spawned on the Capitoline hill by Benito, the Bum, and his black shirts. And later adopted by A. Hitler and others who like that sort of thing.

Plutarch, who was a very careful reporter, mentions hurriedly and with a slightly apologetic air, that the whole story of the she-wolf might be somewhat in error.

He modestly reports that the Roman word for wolf was the same word used for a loose woman and that the two boys, twins, are reported to have had, in one version, such a woman for a nurse, and not a real one.

Be that as it may, the story which has stuck has been that of the she-wolf which suckled them, and of the jay birds which fed them bits of meat and fruit, so that they might grow up, found a city and a legend.

A newspaper man from Floyd county's handsome and thriving city, dropped in yesterday to say that in some circles the statue had been known as the "Statue of the Averted Eyes" and that some of the good ladies of the city would be delighted to have it melted down and thrown back at Benito, the Bum. He said that the statue, with the twins suckling at the dugs of the wolf, had long been obnoxious to some of the feminine organizations of the city who thought it horrid, disgusting and bordering on the obscene. The artists and writers of Italy's Rome were quite realistic, he said. This newspaper man said these ladies would not only vote to have the statue melted down and thrown back at Benito, the Bum, but that they also would be glad to help throw it.

COLLECT YOUR SCRAP All this is a sort of prelude to the fact that we have a drive for scrap going on in the nation and that Atlanta is falling down on the job. And badly.

Mr. Joel C. (Jake) Harris and Mr. Bill Harris, who are not brothers and not the Romulus and Remus of the drive, nevertheless are directing it, and if you have any statures from Benito, the Bum, or other things without question. They also will take any old stove lids, any old iron pots, skillets, irons, or whatever metal you can spare.

Atlanta is doing the worst job only because Atlanta thought the scrap drive was over when the rubber campaign ended. This one is for metal.

Griffin is doing the best job in the state, perhaps the best job in the nation. The people of Griffin have collected some five million pounds of scrap and are aiming at eight.

Columbus has turned in six or eight tremendous Confederate cannon taken from the Confederate fleet. Columbus used to be an ocean port in the manner, but on a lesser scale, of Natchez.

Scrap is melted down in furnaces with some ore and the steel output is thereby kept on a high and increasing level.

A number of cities have turned in old cannon which have been marring the lawns of court houses, American Legion homes and municipal buildings of all kinds. Cannon with some definite link with the past, such as Cobb county's old school cannon, should be kept. But "just cannon," especially those of first World War, should be turned in.

Cannon will be called for. You need not deliver them to the homes of the Messrs. Harrises.

Gather up what you can—old skates, the old brass bed frames, which grandfather cherished; the old gas stove, the old coal range, old lawn mowers, that axe head which won't cut any more, the old pieces of cast-iron pipe—and so on.

Your country needs it.

The Atom Called Man Has Limitless Power if Some Way Is Found to Release It

By ROBERT QUILLEN

All the world has read the story of San Jose's kindness to soldiers—how a great recreation hall was built in one day, dealers supplying the cement and lumber and plumbing and other materials, and hundreds of cement workers, carpenters, plumbers, electricians and painters doing the work without pay; how, when the hall was built, the pup tents were made miserable by continued rains, shelter was provided within 12 hours—in private homes, public buildings and stores; and how the laundries gathered up thousands of wet and muddy blankets and washed and dried them in a night; how the people of the town sidetrack all other concerns and work together in complete unselfishness to do everything they can to make life more pleasant for men in uniform.

It is a lesson in patriotism and decency, but it is more than that. Nobody who understands human nature will be surprised to learn that the San Jose people are having the time of their lives.

The religion of unselfish service, by whatever name it is called, transforms and glorifies human lives as nothing else can do. Like the quality of mercy, it cannot be strained. So long as people hold back something as an atom did; so long as they give reluctantly or stingily, counting the cost and fearing they can't afford it, or comparing their gift with that of others, or thinking their generosity a martyrdom, they have no reward and no enjoyment.

But when they throw the doors of their hearts wide open and offer themselves without limit, working with others for something bigger than themselves, they find a joy in living they never before have known. Their bridges are burned; they are free of all little misgivings; they feel emancipated.

Men are commanded to love God with all their hearts and all their souls and all their minds. Some have done it, and have shaken the world like an earthquake.

That full measure of devotion, to whatever cause it is given, unites comrades as nothing else can and gives them a joyous zeal in service that achieves the impossible.

The Russians have it. Our men on Bataan and Corregidor had it. And we, too, must have it. Without it, we are reluctant servants doing a chore; with it, we shall become crusaders, marching with jubilant feet to quick and inevitable victory.

Friend who knows I am fond of the rural press and its editors asked me the other day why more rural editors didn't come out strongly, in a hell-raising way, for Talmadge or for Arnall.

There are several answers to that. One is that the editor, if he has horse sense, pays more attention to local affairs than to state or national. He is interested—because his subscribers are interested—in judgeships and solicitors-general and the next congressman, if the incumbent has opposition. He may take sides there—but usually not.

But the country weekly publisher has anywhere from 1,500 to 3,000 regular subscribers, upon whom he depends for a livelihood. If he doesn't have readers he can't get advertising.

Half of his subscribers may be for Talmadge and half against him. Or something like that division.

The weekly newspaper publisher knows how he is going to vote and nobody is going to swerve him from personal right of suffrage.

But, he reflects, I have a living to make and a paper to build up by printing news—local news of what's going on in my county.

Why should I get up on my hind legs and cuss out Talmadge or Arnall? When it comes to paying rent and wages and cost of paper they mean nothing in my life. So why should I lose half my subscription list just for the delight of voicing my political opinion? I'll print a certain amount of publicity for both sides and the advertisements of both sides are welcome—if paid in advance. But I think a darn sight more about that next note on my linotype than I do of either Gene or Ellis.

In which, I think, the rural publisher's views are most well considered.

As for the Marines

My friend and fellow toiler in the vineyard, Ralph McGill, has been going all-out for the Marines, a branch of the service which he once adored.

Which is all right by me, though I have a son in the Navy. It is all right by me, also, that another friend, Major Meigs Frost, of the Marines, grabs off a lot of space about those amphibious heroes. Meigs knows his stuff—as an ex-Marine and an ex-newspaper man and a square-shooter—and that isn't "ex." Though he has promised for 11 weeks to do a guest column for me and hasn't come across. Even though I outlined the subject and practically dictated it for him. Shucks! It's easier to do a column than coax somebody else.

But I am reminded of an incident at last spring's Press Institute at Athens. Major Meigs Frost was there, to the delight of all concerned. Although not on the program he was persuaded—and he is persuaded without anesthetics—to speak on the glories of the United States Marines. Which he did. Most glowingly. He recounted their accomplishments "From the Halls of Montezuma to the Shores of Tripoli" and all that. Folks, you'd have thought the Marines whipped Napoleon at Waterloo and chased Kaiser Wilhelm (remember him?) into a rathole and stopped up his hole.

It was a great speech. Meigs was in what we call in Georgia "a weaving way." He had established the Marines as the saviors of democracy, of civilization, as the spearhead of all forces. He received enormous—and well deserved—applause. As he sat down a mild-mannered man in uniform, occupying a seat in the third row, rose to his feet timidly, and asked if the chairman would allow him a word. He was accorded the privilege, most graciously.

"May I remind Major Frost and the audience," he said, timor-ously. "That we also have an Army."

Nude Days Ahead

Beth Williams, of the Quitman Free Press, foresees dire trouble for hosiery manufacturers when this cruel war is over:

"I pity the stocking manufacturers when and if the war is over. It has been next to impossible to get hose this summer. Nylon was as scarce as hen's teeth and having grown accustomed to this luxury, there were those women that turned up their nose at anything else. So what happened? They started going bare-legged, and now it's easier to get a side-saddle on a sow than it is to get a pair stockings on these women."

"Yesterday I saw a woman with stockings on and she was a novelty. Everybody was turning around to stare and then a whispering campaign set in. She was accused of everything from sabotage to mayhem. I called her aside and told her what was happening and she confessed she had to wear stockings to hold her girdle down. She promised she'd go without for a week and then she said now on it we'd call the spy-hunt out."

Navy Cuts Red Tape To Get Flying Cadets

Naval Aviation Week Spurs Enlistment of Navyators.

A special inducement to facilitate enlistments for the four Atlanta Navyator Squadrons was offered to young men of Atlanta, Fulton and DeKalb counties today as Naval Aviation Week opened here in full swing.

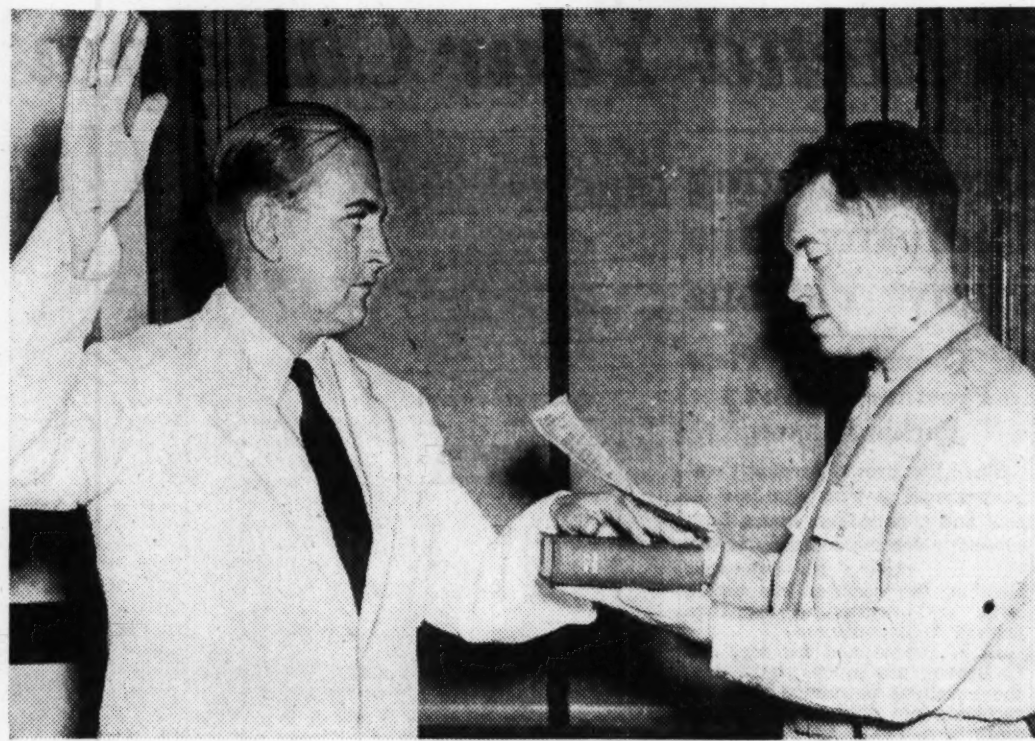

With a view toward making it easier for young Atlantans to join one of the squadrons, the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board announced that, for this week only, no birth certificate or high school transcript will be required of an applicant before enlistment. A man may enlist this week and provide the required documents later.

Normally, a birth certificate, transcript of high school record and other documents are required of an applicant before he is even allowed to stand his physical and mental examinations. The waiver on these requirements for this week only constitutes a new experiment for the Navy and makes this week, in effect, a sort of "bargain week" for enlistment.

In slashing red tape for the week's experiment, Lieutenant Commander S. M. Nordhouse, senior member of the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board, said that "young men may come to the selection board this week, pass their physical and mental examinations and be enlisted the same day. The required documents may be furnished later. Only the written consent of parents is required of boys under 21."

Nordhouse pointed out that "supermen" are not required for enlistment in naval aviation, that a cadet needs only to be normally healthy and fit, single, a high school graduate, 18 to 27 years of age.

Meanwhile, a contest to name the four Atlanta Navyator Squadrons closed Sunday night at mid-

ATLANTAN REJOINS MARINES—Leland Bannister, Atlanta wholesaler, is shown here being sworn in as a captain in the Marine Corps by Lieutenant James Kelly at the Southern Division Headquarters, Atlanta National building. Bannister served with the Army in France during World War I, and later joined the Marine Corps. His wife is the former Mrs. John Hill, of Dunwoody road, Chamblee.

Gather Up Scrap, Bryden Orders

Major General William Bryden, commanding general of Fourth Service Command, has directed commanding officers of all Army posts in the command to collect their scrap iron and immediately dispose of it to junk dealers.

"It is of vital importance that all critical and strategic materials now in salvage be turned back to normal trade channels as promptly as possible," General Bryden said.

He also directed such sales to be made with the understanding that the scrap materials be removed from the reservations immediately.

night, with hundreds of names submitted in the $25 War Bond competition. The judges, three prominent Atlanta civilians who were naval aviators of World War I, today began the task of looking over all the entries and selecting the most suitable names.

Plans call for the results of the contest to be announced Saturday night at the Navy's "Wings of Gold Flight Party," at which the prizes will be awarded to the contest winners, who will be among the guests of honor.

The party which will be held at the city auditorium will climax Naval Aviation Week in Atlanta and will be attended by hundreds of young Atlantans and many high ranking naval officers. More than 3,000 young men and their dates have been invited to the affair, which is sponsored by the Atlanta civilian naval aviation committee headed by O. C. Hubert and Freddie Sington.

passages from a letter from W. W. Gaines, Atlanta attorney, and for several years the president of the Atlanta board of education. I wish there were space for his entire letter, but perhaps these passages will fairly state his viewpoint:

"I have read with much interest your columns on the pending bill in congress to provide federal aid to the public schools in the states. The proposal has within it, I fear, elements of danger to our time-honored policy of state control of public education in the states. For all the declared provisions in the bill for the safeguarding of state policies there is yet danger. . . . There have been in recent years decisions of the United States supreme court that have had an ominous bearing on just such educational matters in the states, particularly in the southern states. Federal aid would mean to a greater or lesser extent federal control. Purse strings mean, to the extent of the purse, influence and direction. Federal aid to state education is inconsistent with the constitutional relationship of the states and the national government. The states are entities, not dependencies."

"In my political thought I have always been a disciple of Jefferson, an antifederalist, a Democrat. Jefferson was for a strong federal government. Jefferson greatly feared a strong, centralized federal government. But even Hamilton did not go as far as paternalism—as far as financial aid to the states. Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland would not have stood for it a minute. Students of history will recall the case of the first direct appropriation for relief ever passed by congress—the case of a small amount of money for Texas, in the face of a great disaster. Cleveland promptly vetoed it, declaring that the states should support the government, and not the government the states. . . . Some have said that a benevolent monarchy is the best government, but I do not agree to that. Give me our form of government—an indestructible union of indestructible states. Let us keep it that way."

chasing agent under Talmadge. Of north Georgia, De La Perriere said:

"I have been up in the mountains of north Georgia several times this summer resting up and fishing. Of course I see friends of mine and talk politics with them. I have been going over the 9th congressional district for 25 years. I know the people of the 9th district as my brother has run for congress in this district and I also have been going to see the main politicians for Gene Talmadge every time he has run for an office since 1926 when he first ran for commissioner of agriculture, and I know the Talmadge men."

Former Stronghold. "This is the way I find things this time Talmadge has always been strong in the 9th district but, honest, he is weak in the 9th district this time. You find a majority of all the county officials against him this time. His main leaders in the counties, over half of the old crowd, are against him. They are fed up on Talmadge."

"He has double-crossed so many of his main followers—men like Sheriff Ed Jones in Union county. He has always been a Talmadge man but is fighting him like everything this time. Union county will go against him. I know Sheriff Jones would have never gotten off Talmadge unless he was double-crossed."

"In Fannin county you find Honorable Tom Crawford, who formerly was a loyal Talmadge supporter, also Colonel Bill Butts. They are against him this time. You find the sheriff of Dawson county fighting Talmadge this time as well as other county officials."

Betrays Friends. "I have been in most of the counties of the 9th district and I find old Talmadge men now for Ellis Arnall. They almost to a man tell me, 'De La Perriere, Talmadge went back on old Talmadge men. When we went to Atlanta to see him we told him and him or were told by his Palace Guards, like Johnny Goodwin, that he was not in when we knew he was in his hotel room. But, we were not in with the new crowd that stayed around him and could not see him. We have been off of Talmadge this time.'"

"This is what the Talmadge old friends tell me everywhere. 'Talmadge is a beat man today. I listen to his speeches. He has to turn and ask his bodyguard 'what next?' when he talks. He does not sound like the Talmadge of old. His old crowd, over 50 per cent in the counties where I have been, are leaving him."

"I am an old University of Georgia football player. I have two nephews at Georgia this year. I want to see these boys make a record, but with the University off the accredited system their diploma will not be worth a thing unless we get rid of Talmadge."

"He is a beat man as it stands today. He picked up a new crowd and went back on his old friends. That has made him what he is today—a beat man."

"He stabbed Hugh Howell in the back. He carried his own county for Ed Rivers by a big majority. He stabbed Tom Linder, Charlie Stewart, Herman De La Perriere and hundreds of other loyal Talmadge men, but it's goodbye Talmadge this time."

"As to the medicine show for the Talmadge employees and state capital crowd every Friday night at the Erlanger theater—I sit and listen to it."

"When I used to be a Talmadge man I learned how they pull the medicine show. Boys, don't be fooled by the noise. Old Talmadge is a beat man. This time he is a goner. The 9th district is going for Ellis Arnall this time. You can fool the people for a while, but not all the time. 'My country men,' as Talmadge says."

Melton Urges Talmadge To Drop Race Row

Griffin Editor Regrets Governor's Injection Of Controversy.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. GRIFFIN, Ga., Aug. 16.—Declaring that the United States is "neck deep in the most serious war" we have ever been in, Editor Quimby Melton, of the Griffin Daily News, said in his personal column this week: "Certainly this is no time for groups of people to be suspicious of one another. There is no 'race problem' in Georgia, unless it has been fanned by charges of Governor Talmadge and others who are willing to do anything to carry their point."

Melton charged the present Governor injected the race issue in his campaign last year when he "purged" the University System of men, by action of his revamped Board of Regents, whom he said had advocated "racial co-education," and since that time has continued to warn Georgians that "white supremacy" was endangered in Georgia. He asserted the Governor had apparently forgotten his opening day speech at Albany in 1940, in which he said: "Any doctrine that preaches class hatred in Georgia is a sin of the deepest dye. Any doctrine that preaches prejudice is merely the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing. No religious or racial prejudice has any place in a Christian heart."

Editor Melton urged that the "fake" issue of race trouble in Georgia be immediately dropped from the present campaign by all concerned, for it is rightly alarming many people—both white and colored.

"As to the medicine show for the Talmadge employees and state capital crowd every Friday night at the Erlanger theater—I sit and listen to it."

Army Unit To Train Canines For Vital Roles in War Duty

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—(P) Private Pup, of the canine corps, soon will embark on an intensive training program which will prepare him for service as a sentry, messenger, pack dog, airplane spotter and as protection against enemy parachute troops, the Army announced today.

As soon as kennels are completed at Front Royal, Va., the Army's canine corps will be trained by the remount division, Quartermaster Corps, Services of Supply, the announcement said.

Dogs Donated. The four-legged fighters are being recruited by Dogs for Defense, Inc., from patriotic people who donate their pets for the duration. Army officers have listed about 15 breeds which are especially desired, but the canine corps is a democratic outfit and Private Pup's temperament, ability to follow commands and similar qualifications are far more important than his pedigree.

Qualifications are amazingly similar to regular army needs. The dog must be fairly large, in good health, from one to five years old and have a fearless disposition. He must not be gun shy and it must undergo a thorough physical examination.

Sex Unimportant. Finally—and in this day of WAACS and WAVES, this is important—Private Pup can be of either sex. Each recruit will get four weeks or more of training at the Front Royal depot and then be sent to a specific post where more specialized training will prepare him (or her) for a definite duty.

Right now, the biggest need for dogs is for sentry duty around camps, posts, beaches, munitions plants and similar key points. Private Pup's keen sense of sight, smell and hearing easily outranks that of his human comrade in arms and his superior stamina keeps him on the job far longer at a stretch.

On sentry duty, Private Pup merely disarms any intruder and holds him helpless until the two-legged guard arrives. There is always the possibility that the stranger might be innocent of any sabotage or espionage intentions. Some of his other training is less gentle. What he does when ordered to attack is guaranteed to affect the death rate of America's enemies.

After the war is over, Private Pup will return to his human comrade in arms, but, like many another soldier, the sound of a bugle probably will always make him snap to attention.

Georgian Reported

'Missing,' Said Alive

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 16.—Lieutenant Jack Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Moore, of Barnesville, who was reported several weeks ago by the War Department as "missing in action," is alive and still fighting, according to a letter received by a man from Missouri, who called on the Moores here this week. The letter was from the Missouri's son, a captain in the Philippines, who stated that he and four other American officers were hiding out in the mountains, fighting with a guerrilla band that is still giving the Japs a lot of trouble.

One of the men, he said, is Lieutenant Jack Moore, of Barnesville. The letter was smuggled out of the islands and took several weeks to reach America.

I WONDER, HUBERT, WHY THEY DON'T GET MORE BUSES?

MAYBE Hubert doesn't know it, but we have just received five new 45-passenger buses, allocated to us by the Office of Defense Transportation.

Five buses are not many for a city of Atlanta's size. Nineteen of these big buses and 30 trackless trolleys have been on order since the first of the year. But these five new buses are all that have been received. How many more we will get, and when we will get them, are uncertain.

New equipment cannot be obtained except with the express approval of the ODT in Washington. The War Production Board has drastically curtailed the manufacture of transit vehicles, and the ODT is allocating the few vehicles produced to those localities which appear to have the greatest war transportation needs.

That is the way it has to be in this war. The materials that make trolleys and buses are more urgently needed to make guns, planes, ships and tanks. A fighting nation cannot afford to compromise strength in war for domestic convenience.

Patriotism demands that we accept this situation without complaint and make the fullest possible use of existing equipment. Even though the cars are crowded, we are confident the people of Atlanta will accept today's transportation difficulties with patience.

Have Georgia Reweavers Mend Your Children's School Clothes

Snags, Tears Neatly Closed By Experts

Company at 22 Cain Street, Also Branch in Decatur.

School days will soon be here again—and Willie and Mary and Jack and all the little girls and boys will have to put on their school clothes and be among those present.

Mothers, no doubt, will find many snags and torn places in the clothes the children have been wearing during the holiday. If so, these mothers will find a great helper in the Georgia Reweaving & Tailoring Company. The young women who operate this place know how to reweave and close up all the snags or tears on clothes of all descriptions, and this makes their work of fixing children's clothes a comfort to many mothers.

Before the little fellows trod off to school, look over the suits, coats, pants, dresses, etc., and see how many places need attention. Then drop by 22 Cain street, rear of the Henry Grady hotel, and let the Georgia Reweaving & Tailoring Company repair these garments so neatly that it will be difficult to find the repaired place.

Thrifty men and women will also find satisfaction in the handiwork of needlework done by these girls, as they have raised this fine art in re-weaving so you can't tell where the damage was done.

Sighs of relief and smiles of pleasure have come from working wives and bachelors, who are too busy to bother with holes in suits, overcoats and dresses and frayed shirt collars since they have heard of the artistry of the needles of the Georgia Re-Weavers.

Examined under a magnifying glass, the material is matched exactly, and the threads are woven in one by one, even matching the most intricate plaid, check or any other pattern.

The shop is owned and operated entirely by Atlantans and Mrs. Sara Bentley-McKinley, proprietor, was apprenticed in the business quite some time before opening her own company.

The company is also operating a branch re-weaving place in Decatur, at 126 Atlanta avenue, just off the square. Telephone CR. 4961. Mrs. McKinley assures the public the same high-class work will be done in this new branch as is done in her main Atlanta shop. Workers of experience, trained in her Atlanta place, are engaged here, and satisfaction is guaranteed on every job.

MOTHERS KNOW—Here is one showing places that need repairing to one of the expert mending artists at the Georgia Reweaving and Tailoring Company at 22 Cain street, rear of Henry Grady hotel.

Brown Awning Company Wins Many Patrons

Its Commodious Plant Provides Plenty Parking Space.

Since the Brown Awning Company moved a year ago into its new and commodious home, built especially for the company at 228 Margaret street, in Lakewood Heights, the concern has had a large and continuing increased growth in its business.

L. S. Brown and his son, Jos. L. Brown, are much gratified at the excellent patronage they are receiving not only in this immediate area, but from all over the southeast, and by reason of their new location are able and pleased to give even greater and better service for its patrons.

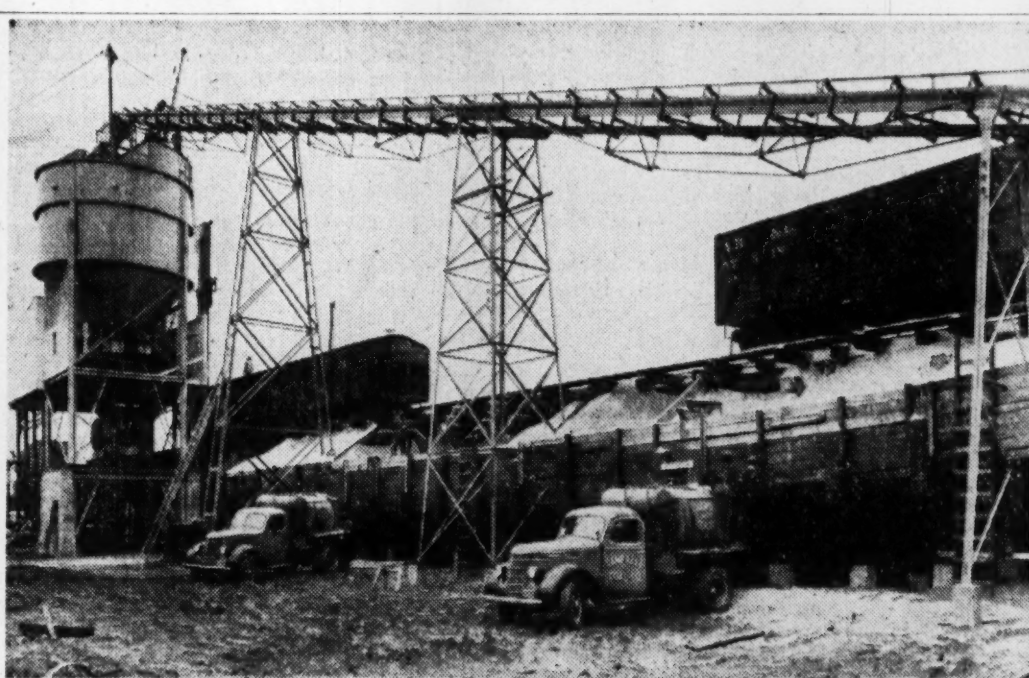

The company operates its own stripping plant, being one of two firms in the southeast who do this. This enables the concern to handle the entire manufacturing job and thereby control the quality of its products. The firm's extensive equipment is considered among the best in the industry.

The new home of the company is equipped with a sprinkler system, has fluorescent lighting, with large glass windows so designed as to eliminate sun glare. The company's products include "Peacock" awning and Venetian blinds, window shades, canopies, "Protex-a-Lode" waterproof tarpaulins, other canvas goods, and "Brown's Best Bill" tents for gospel, show, camping and display purposes.

Large parking space on street level is provided for customers and the showrooms provide a complete and splendid display of the various products of the company.

The Brown Awning Company was established in 1926. For a long time its quarters were at 291 Ivy street.

Retailing its products in Atlanta, the Brown Awning Company also sells its merchandise throughout the southeast.

A 300-TON BLAW-KNOX ready-mix concrete material bin and automatic control batchers, with belt conveyors, over a two cubic yard Koehring non-tilting concrete mixer, now serving war projects. This plant delivers 55,000 cubic yards of ready-mix concrete per year. W. C. Caye & Company sold this plant to Campbell Coal Company, Atlanta, Ga.

W. C. Caye & Co. Is Serving Many Emergency Projects

Plays Important Role in Defense Construction Jobs.

War emergency construction in Georgia, as well as similar work outside the state, is being greatly helped by the trained staff of equipment engineers and mechanics engaged at the plant of W. C. Caye & Company.

Many of these trained and experienced workers have been with the Caye Company practically the entire 15 years the company has been in business in Atlanta. The complete aid being furnished is provided for both large and small construction equipment and machinery of some nature on most of the war emergency construction jobs being carried on throughout this state and some adjoining states.

At times this force works 24 hours a day, with an average of 56 hours per week. All employees are keyed up to the necessity involved, and a force of some 25 to 30 men keep steadily on the job and in a way do their part for the present effort.

The motto of this concern—and it is also the motto of the trained force—is "Call on Us," and they are doing their jobs so well that those needing the kind of service they render are finding they live squarely up to their motto.

Aurex Hearing Aids Appoints BBDO Agency

National Advertising Campaign Is Part of Expansion Program.

Walter H. Huth, president of the Aurex Corporation of Chicago, announces the appointment of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., as the advertising agency for Aurex Hearing Aid instruments. This is the first use of national advertising by the company, and BBDO will work out immediate plans for the national campaign, plus co-ordinated local newspaper campaigns in the 123 marketing areas of the Aurex offices. The agency will work with C. D. Pettengill, advertising director for Aurex, and the account will be handled through the Chicago office by BBDO.

National advertising is but one part of the company's extensive expansion program, according to Mr. Huth. Another step is the franchising of exclusive representatives in the company's few remaining open territories. These new representatives are being drawn from various industries where the low per cent conversion to war work has made successful salesmen available. In line with its aim to provide more manpower for America's war effort, the government has placed a public-health priority rating on hearing aids, thus assuring a continued supply of material.

For nearly a quarter of a century, Aurex engineers have specialized in the research and development of vacuum tube amplification. The company's phenomenal growth has been due largely to its creation and development of the tiny vacuum tubes which made possible the modern, high-fidelity hearing-aid instruments.

The local offices of Aurex Atlanta Company are located at 1001 William-Oliver building.

The Army and Navy in Georgia

Insignia to be worn by personnel of the newly created Transportation Corps of the Army will symbolize rail, water and highway transportation, according to Major Moses A. Foster, chief of the branch in the Fourth Service Command.

A winged railroad car wheel, symbolic of railroad transportation, flanked on a rail and charged on a shield placed upon an eight-spoke ship's steering wheel, is the design for the official insignia. The shield, fashioned after the national flag, is divided into three sections, representing highway transportation, and the ship's wheel, water transportation. The insignia will be worn by both officers and enlisted men, the officers' as a cutout and the enlisted men's mounted on a disk.

The newly adopted colors of the Transportation Corps are brick red piped with golden yellow. They will appear on the garrison cap of enlisted personnel and be used on guidons and other symbols of the corps.

The new insignia will be the first ever worn by the Army to denote transportation activities.

500 WOMEN APPLY FOR NAVY COMMISSIONS

Women in the southeast want to be officers in the United States Navy, according to word from officials of the Sixth Naval District, who are literally swamped under an avalanche of applications from women of Georgia, Florida and the two Carolinas.

More than 500 applications from these four states are now in the hands of naval officials at Charleston, headquarters of the district.

Lieutenant Mildred Lawrence McFall, a former Atlanta school teacher and one of the first women in the south to receive a commission in the Navy, is in charge of the applications. Miss McFall announced a total of 25 women officers and 60 midshipmen will be selected from these four states.

The officers will be indoctrinated at Cornell University, and the midshipmen, be killed in the applications. Miss McFall announced a total of 25 women officers and 60 midshipmen will be selected from these four states.

Requirements for the Women's Reserve of the Navy follow:

—Be a female citizen of the United States not less than 21 and under 30 years of age. If unmarried, agree not to marry prior to completion of indoctrination and training. If married, have no children under 18. Be of good reputation in the community. Be able to demonstrate sufficient aptitude and ability in the use of a typewriter to qualify for clerical and communications work.

—Be a high school graduate or have taken courses of a business school and have additional business experience to be the equivalent of a high school education. Getting The Range at Fort Mac

Colonel A. G. Conoley, head of the Fourth Service Command Civilian Training School, yesterday clarified requirements for entrance in training for radio operators.

Physically qualified men who are eligible for enlistment in the Army may apply for this training. They will be enlisted in the enlisted reserve corps and then sent to school as civilians, receiving civilian pay for the time they are in school.

Upon completion of training, the men will be called to duty with the Army. These radio operators will be military personnel and training is open to all men interested who can qualify for the Enlisted Reserve Corps.

Inquiries may be made at Colonel Conoley's office at Fort McPherson. Training radio operators is one phase of the extensive training program operated under his supervision.

Staff Sergeant William Salter, of Rochelle, Ga., has been wandering around post headquarters at Fort McPherson lately with an unsteady gait, a glassy stare and a sack full of pennies.

The 400th penny was added to the sack Saturday and Sergeant Salter told his secret: "I'm going to be married tonight."

The girl is the former Miss Elsie Gunn, of Crawfordville, now living in Atlanta. The 400 pennies, accumulated over a period of many weeks, were used to pay for the marriage license.

You've got to join the Army to get two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City.

The military authorities have just taken over dozens of big hotels there for the duration.

Now there are three branches of the service. Army, Navy and room.

They have also taken over the mammoth Stevens in Chicago. I have always claimed it would take an army to run that place.

If you see an important officer with a red stripe down his pants, a blue frock, a gold chain and key around his neck, it will be a new rank in the Army. That's the sommelier with the key for the wine cellar.

Victory is in the Air!

JOIN THE "NAVYATOR"* FORCES NOW AND BOMB THE AXIS TO OBLIVION!

Without air power, our ships can't sail the seas! Without plenty of planes, we can't protect our island landing parties! Without thousands of trained pilots—we can't even think of a second front! But—with air superiority over our enemies—we shall win this war fast!

Your Navy is calling upon Atlanta, Fulton and DeKalb Counties for four squadrons of airmen to start training immediately! 30 men to the squadron—you will train and fight together for the duration! 120 men strong—you will win recognition for Atlanta's fighting spirit!

If you are between 18 and 27 years old, a high school graduate and unmarried, you are eligible to serve! You must be mentally alert, physically sound, willing to learn! Upon completion of 10 months' training, you will be commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserves or an Ensign in the U. S. Naval Reserves—at $291 a month!

The Navy needs 30,000 "Navyator" Cadets a year! It is your job to help meet this quota! Join today—and fly with the toughest, best-trained group of Americans who ever fought for Freedom!

*A "Navyator" is a U. S. Navy-trained Pilot, qualified to fly any type of plane.

Possessive Attitude Is Guaranteed To Make a Man More Wary

Dear Dixie:

By Dixie George.

I am 27 years old and have been in love with him for two years. I met him soon after he came to live in my home town and we have been going together ever since. But this is my problem: He was in love with my cousin before he came here and when he moved to my home town my cousin wrote and asked me to invite him out to dinner and he came to my home town and he was in love with my cousin. I think Frank should be the jitters one. Has it occurred to you that maybe your cousin does not love him any more? I do not mean by that, that you have been second choice, but maybe she has lessened her love for him and she knows the situation as it now stands. As I said before, I think

Frank is the one to be worrying, for with the two of you right in the house, he can hardly be the ardent suitor to both of you at the same time and get away with it. My advice to you is to be calm about the whole thing and sit back and watch results. If he loves you as you think he does and wants to marry you, then his attention toward your cousin should be taken very lightly, by you at least. If you notice that he has fallen in love with her all over again, and is deserting you, do not create a scene, just let him alone. Men do not like a girl who acts too possessive, but there are countless little ways by which you can let your cousin see how the situation stands. Just keep your eyes and ears open during the entire visit and take in everything, but do not get confidential with your cousin about Frank. You know, no midnight talks in bed, saying "he told me this and he told me that." After this visit I think that you can size him pretty well. Remember, he was in love with someone else when he fell for you.

SECURITY MUST BE VALUED

Dear Dixie:

I have been married for nine years. I married when I was 16 and many times I have realized that it was entirely too young. Four years ago I met a man of 28, unmarried, and we dated for two years. But during the past year we have not seen each other quite as much. I know that he has been going with another married woman and it worries me to death wondering if he loves her better than he does me. I do not love my husband, and for that reason I have been going with this man trying to recapture some of the love and romance I have missed in life. This man is so sweet to me and tells me he loves me better than anyone else in the world. I always write him when he asks me to but he will never answer my letters. My husband and I still live together and he is true to me, but I love this other man. I know he goes with another woman, for I have seen them together, although my friends say that he loves me best. What do you think?

WANT TO KNOW.

To be perfectly honest with you, I do not think this man cares for either of you. Both of you are married and should be staying home with your husbands and if there is any running around to do, run with them. I think this man is the type who wants to have these casual-off-the-record love affairs with married women, without having to assume the responsibilities of a husband and married life. Of course he did not answer your letters. He was too smart for that. He knew that maybe your husband would see them. He knew that anything that he would put down in black and white could be used against him sometime.

You made no reference to it, but I will bet that in the four years that you have gone with him, he did not one time mention the desire for you to get a divorce so you could marry. Maybe you did marry young, and maybe you did miss out on romance but there are two things for you to remember; either stay with your husband, be true to him and make him a good wife, or get a divorce and leave him.

Reducing Diet Easy To Follow During the Summer Months

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you thought you had just 30 days left in which to lose your excess weight or be stuck with it for life, nothing in the world could stop you for going on a diet today, beginning with your next meal. Well, you have just about a month of this warm, sultry weather left. During that time, it will be easy for you to tame your appetite and cut down on food. When the crisp tang of fall gets in the air, you will find it much harder. Start today and you can lose 10 pounds by September 15. That may be only a fraction of the amount you need to lose, but the first 10 pounds is the hardest part. That much off will take you over the hump as far as your appetite goes. Also, you will look so much better you'll keep right on going until you are slim.

With the weather in your favor, you don't have to be very strict. All you have to do to lose is take most of your calories in the form of the protective foods, and eat in moderation. If you eat the essentials of the nutrition yardstick, you won't miss the extras. And that puts you on better menu than you ordinarily follow. As a result, you don't lose your disposition, you don't get hungry, and you feel wonderful.

WASHING PREVENTS ODORS.

Dinner buckets, lunch pails, vacuum thermos bottles will not develop a stale odor if they are washed thoroughly with warm soapy water, rinsed, and dried in the sun after each use. Men who have to carry their food to work every day do well to have two lunch pails and two bottles so that one may be thoroughly cleaned and aired while the other is in use.

How To Recognize Poison Ivy

By Dr. William Brady.

Waist-deep in summer is poison ivy—the time when most vacationists have a go at it. No harm to remind those who have not already learned the hard way what a nippon-nazi plant it is. Poison ivy and poison oak are woody perennial vines or shrubs or low erect plants. Their leaves are divided into three leaflets on a stalk, two of the leaflets opposite and with short stems, the third leaflet in the middle on a larger stem. The leaves are two or three inches long, dark green on the upper surface, lighter green and velvety with a fine hairy covering on the under surface. The leaves are sometimes known by other names such as poison elder, poisonwood, poison ash, poison dogwood, or thunderbolt, growing as a shrub with several slender clustered stems or as a tree 10 to 20 feet high, with trunk several inches thick. Its leaves are a foot or so long, having from 7 to 13 leaflets on a stalk, each leaflet an inch wide and three or four inches long. Leaflets dark green on upper surface (bright orange when they first unfold in early spring), lighter green and, in the spring, having a velvety covering of fine hairs on under surface (like poison ivy leaflets).

Harmless sumacs have more leaflets to the stalk (9 to 21 and 31). Their flowers occur in densely covered upright terminal spikes of a deep red shade. The flowers of poison sumac resemble rather the flowers of poison ivy—yellowish-green in color in narrow clusters growing out of the angles of leaf stems, and are followed by waxy or ivory fruits.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Cheese and Milk.

Group of dairy workers making bets on the answer to this and leaving it up to you. Which has more nourishment or food value in it, milk or cheese? Also, what proportion of milk is water. (A. J.)

Answer—Cottage cheese has a food value of about 500 calories per pound; Swiss cheese, 2,000 calories per pound; American cheese, 2,000 calories per pound; milk, 320 calories per pound. Cottage cheese is over two-thirds water; American and Swiss or Swiss type cheese slightly less than one-third water; milk is nearly nine-tenths water (87%). For my commission I have a dipper of Grade A raw milk from tuberculin tested cow, before it cools?

Rash.

Following suggestion in booklet "CVD" I took vitamin B complex three times a day for about a month and then had small pimples break out on my neck in back of scalp. So I stopped. (F. C. M.)

Answer—Vitamin B complex would hardly account for the rash.

No Salt.

Have not used any table salt for several months. In consequence have lost my appetite. Only eat to live. Can you suggest any harmless substitute for salt? (D. A. M.)

Answer—Every one needs a reasonable amount of salt daily—at least 15 or 20 grains. I know of no substitute for salt. Particularly in hot weather or when sweating freely from work or play in the heat or sun, one should consume plenty of salt to replace the increased excretion in the sweat. A good pinch of salt with every drink of water, is more refreshing, better prevention against sunstroke or heat exhaustion or heat cramps, than plain water or other unsalted beverage.

Why Have Headaches?

I am writing to thank you for your booklet "Why Have Headaches?"—It has guided me back to fine health, after years of suffering with headaches. (J. R. L.)

Answer—Thank you, sir. On request I am glad to send the pamphlet "Why Have Headaches" to any reader who provides stamped envelope bearing his address.

Dog Days Come to Hollywood; Testy Screen Folks Fret

By Harold Hefternan.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 16.—West coast dimout, in effect next week, not only kills night shots for all studios, but kaysos the screen crowd's favorite sport—badminton. More night badminton has been played in Hollywood than any place in the world. . . . Ann Sothern's face has been swollen for six weeks. She faces a major dental operation before starting another picture. . . . MGM would please like to have Ava Gardner Rooney stop talking about her marital affairs. She has been giving out some interviews. . . . United Artists would be well pleased with a straight-forward statement from Charlie Chaplin about his production plans. Playing true to form, Charlie has announced at least a dozen movies during the past year and hasn't lifted a finger on one.

The draft is certainly de-glammorizing a flock of Hollywood's handsome pans. Celluloid heroes far-famed for their athletic prowess are now publicizing bum tickers, bad legs and other physical defects previously kept a dark secret from admiring ticket buyers. "Late-thirty" actors have suddenly turned up as 45-year-olds and many whistle for the kids to gather round whenever a photographer sets up his camera. It's disillusioning, that's what it is!

OFF THE CELLULOID CUFF:

George Montgomery's voice is a natural dupe for that of Clark Gable. When "Orchestra Wives" plays your theater, look away from the screen as George speaks and make the test for yourself. Other Hollywood voice-alikes are Douglas Fairbanks Jr. (by debauched cultivation) and Ronald Colman plus George Sanders and Tom Conroy. In the latter case, they're brothers. . . . Lou Costello smokes 15 cigars a day, but never has puffed tobacco in a movie. Producers think smoking would be inharmonious with his wistful, cherubic character—and they seem to have something there. . . . Victor Mature owns the biggest chest of any movie hero. And he looked twice as big and husky when he turned up the other day in his Coast Guard uniform. . . . Crawford is busy ghost-writing her autobiography—but not for a movie. A magazine will serialize it. . . . When Universal signed Dwight Taylor he was handed the usual lengthy biographical form to fill out for the publicity department. It came back reading: "I was born. I live. I will die."

Same blurb bureau releases a priceless item detailing difficulties encountered in getting Deanna Durbin to cry just two teeny-weeny little tears for the camera's eye. Simply couldn't be done. An anguished producer was about to write the scene out. Came lunch time. Back on the set, Deanna asked for one more crack at it. And, as the item chronicles, "Down her cheeks came large tears—just right—and they were strictly mental, without benefit of air or menthol."

What had happened to our once-gay heroine meanwhile? Listen: "Scene that when Deanna returned to her dressing room for lunch some caretaker had trimmed the large bushes outside her door, not realizing that within their branches nestled a hummingbird nest containing a pair of baby birds. And not knowing that Deanna had been looking after them for several weeks, giving the little ones a tiny bit of honey and water in an eye dropper each noon. Thought of the birds being tossed into the Universal trash pile did the trick."

Myrna Loy hasn't yet given MGM an absolutely final "No" on the matter of making another movie, but if Culver City executives want to get the real inside, let them give W. I. Berger, Beverly Hills automobile dealer, a ring.

Mr. Berger announces definitely that Miss Loy, recently wed, has retired from the screen and will reside in the east.

MY DAY: A Visit To Cannon Mills

By Eleanor Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Friday.—Yesterday, in Salisbury, N. C., was a really busy day. In the morning, the Y. M. C. A. arranged for some kind ladies to take me to see the town and one of the big cotton mills. The town of Salisbury has some beautiful old houses and the trees are very fine, which adds great attraction to many of the streets.

The cotton mill is one of the biggest in that neighborhood known as the Cannon Mills. They employ some 16,000 people and have evidently been very enlightened in their dealings with their employees. I was told they had established a building and loan fund, and encouraged the ownership of house and land by their employees. If work is slack, the building and loan fund does not collect any payments during the lay-off period.

They have a most beautiful building in which the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. are housed, and they told me that this "Y" has the biggest membership of any in the United States. It certainly was being used by young people when we went through there. It is decorated in good taste, which they credit to the two Mrs. Cannons, who take a great interest in the activities of the "Y."

Mr. Cannon told me that most of the work is done on a piece-work basis, and outside of a few people in the day laborer class, the average earning power of a woman is $22 a week. In view of all this, which seems to meet high union standards, I was surprised to find that the mill was not unionized, but Mr. Cannon said they had always had remarkably good labor relations ever since his father had started the mill in '88 after the War Between the States.

Lunched with a group of ladies representing all the various women's organizations, such as the Daughters of the Confederacy, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Women's Clubs, the Parent-Teachers Association, etc.

I spent from 2 o'clock on the campus of Livingston College, meeting first in a general session some 400 young colored people. I later attended their various commission meetings. At 5:30 o'clock the mayor and I, with various other officials, reviewed a parade from the courthouse steps.

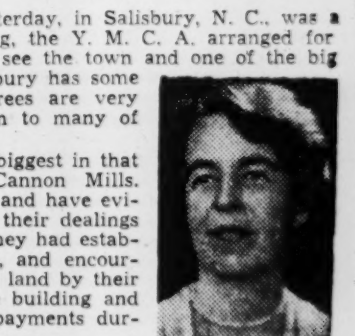

I returned to my hotel long enough to have supper. During this half-hour, four of the National Youth Administration executives came to tell me of the successful training of both boys and girls for war industry on the North Carolina projects. At 7 o'clock I was back at Livingston College and the evening meeting began at 7:30 o'clock.

I just finished speaking in time to make the 9:35 o'clock train. A kindly crowd saw me off at the station and I signed, during the day, innumerable autograph books.

"I just bought her 1941 station wagon," said Mr. Berger. "And when Miss Loy gets rid of her station wagon that means she is getting to stay east and not make any more pictures. In fact, she told me as much."

Berger has sold Myrna station wagons for the past seven years, a new model each fall.

"In Hollywood she never drives any other type," he said. "I state to see her go. She was my nearest customer. And she knew how to drive and take care of an automobile better than any actress I know."

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES).—Upset conditions and sudden changes resulting in loss will mark new beginnings today. You will probably notice more arguments, quarrels or disputes today, and because of a lack of thought or lack of precaution, accidents will be more in evidence.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS).—The influences prevailing previous to 11:14 p. m. are such that may cause feelings to be quickly ruffled. Affairs started before this time are likely to encounter many trying situations.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI).—Before 3:41 p. m. and after 8:31 p. m. is an excellent period, especially in matters that involve mental effort. Contacts with others should result agreeable and this will be an auspicious time for dealing with those who are at the head of affairs.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER).—Harmonious influences abound throughout the entire day, making this an auspicious time for confidence, discussions, messages, new moves, and you can move forward with the expectation of receiving co-operation from others.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO).—It will pay to examine all situations today, not to enter into new obligations and new ideas impulsively. Plans of a daring nature may be placed before you, but when your investigation started they are apt to lack soberness and soundness.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO).—Before 11:51 a. m. favors irate, quick decisions, and changes. After 11:51 a. m. favors general business interests and for making business arrangements with others.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA).—The day does not especially favor new beginnings, if you wish for smooth and steady progress. The day favors dealings with friends, relatives and general business matters.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO).—The entire day and until 6:30 p. m. favors redress and routine matters. This is especially true in connection with communications, correspondence and conferences.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS).—The entire day and until 7:43 p. m. favors redress and routine matters. This is especially true in connection with communications, correspondence and conferences.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN).—Before 10:23 a. m. does not favor speculative ideas. Between 10:23 a. m. and 2:32 p. m. favors interests pertaining to land. After 2:32 p. m. favors sticking to routine matters.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS).—Before 10:05 a. m. may be a slow period and you may find it difficult to keep affairs going. The remainder of the day seems filled with favorable influence, making this an auspicious period to seek favors, consultations.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES).—The combined influences today bring matters involving the feelings and emotions to the front, and delay and anxiety to these matters. The day does not especially favor new beginnings or making changes in plans.

• • • DOZENS OF SOCIALITES are escaping the cauldrons of the fahrenheit at Highlands, N. C., where they are ensconced at the picturesque Highlands Country Club, and in its surrounding cottages. While Atlanta swelters in unaccustomed heat vacationists at the North Carolina resort are sleeping beneath BLANKETS every night.

A clever party held there recently was that at which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thornton and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Abreu entertained at the Club casino. Cocktails were served in a setting beautified with coral gladioli, and a stringed orchestra played for square dancing.

Bobby Bear called the numbers, and his partner was attractive Jane Woodruff. Glimpsed among the square dancers were Mrs. Robert Maddox and Everett Strupper, "Chip" Robert and Mrs. Green Warren, Mrs. J. D. Robinson Jr. and John O. Chiles, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Francis Abreu and Mr. Thornton.

Many of the lovely homes on the club grounds are occupied this summer. Mr. and Mrs. George Woodruff, of Daytona Beach Fla., are ensconced in their home, "Rustwood," and have as their guests their charming daughters, Jane Frances and Mrs. Alfred Michael, the former Irene Woodruff.

Mr. and Mrs. John Grant Jr., are spending the month of August in the Gould cottage with their three children, Josephine, Sarah Frances and John III. Their guests are Mr. and Mrs. John O. Chiles, Dr. and Mrs. Green Warren and their daughters, Anne and Florence, have a charming cottage, as have Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ryman and daughter, Glenn.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woodruff have taken a cottage, and have as their guest their mother, Mrs. Prince Hodgson, of Athens. Mr. and Mrs. John K. Otley are spending a few days at the boys' club, and are popular figures attending festivities given by the Highlands summer colony.

The "Chip" Roberts have as their guests Governor Frank Dixon and Mrs. Dixon, of Alabama, while Mr. and Mrs. James Floyd have with them Mr. and Mrs. George Glenn. Visitors in the Lee Ashcraft cottage are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lanier, of West Point, Ga., and the Ashcraft's attractive daughter, Mrs. C. A. McGinnis Jr.

Mrs. William Healey has arrived to occupy a resort home, and will have as her guests Mr. and Mrs. William Healey and Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Healey. Mr. and Mrs. Allison Thornwell have taken possession of the newly-completed home, and their sons, Jimmy, Allison Jr. and English, are enjoying festivities assembling the younger set.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kline are spending the summer at their home, "Buena Vista," while Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCord have as guests in their home, "The Orchard," Mrs. R. T. Kingman, of Macon, and her two children.

An attractive group occupying Doug Roberts' cottage includes Mr. and Mrs. Everett Strupper, Mr. and Mrs. James D. Robinson Jr., and the Robinson children, Jimmy and Frances.

Also enjoying the gala social program at Highlands are Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Shepard, who are at their home on Little Yellow Mountain; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crenshaw, whose home is a popular gathering place for their friends; Mrs. Ed Van Winkle, Mrs. Rutherford Ellis, former Governor James Cox, of Ohio; George Bridges, Mr. and Mrs. George Lanier, Mr. and Mrs. George Lanier, Jr., of West Point, Ga.; Mrs. H. Clay Moore, Mrs. Robert T. Jones and daughter, Mary; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Dick and Henry Dick, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Medlock, T. E. Horton, E. W. Hudson, Henry M. Lodge, Dr. Calvin Sandison and Mrs. Sandison, Lieutenant Hughes Spalding Jr. and Mrs. Spalding and Tom Wilson.

• • • MRS. LOVELLA Dorsey Greene's book of poetry entitled "No Greater Love," recently came off the press. It is dedicated to the memory of her daughter, Josephine Greene, and was released on the birthday anniversary of the latter. The book was published by Dorrance, of Philadelphia.

Josephine Greene died three years ago from injuries received in an accident. She was educated at Cox College and was president of Cox College Alumnae Association. Mrs. Greene has lived in Atlanta all of her life with the exception of five years spent in Chattanooga. Her only son, Marion Dorsey Greene, resides in Chattanooga.

Mrs. Greene composed some of the poems before the death of her beloved daughter, and some were written after her demise. Each poem carries its own appeal and exquisite sentiment. Just recently Mrs. S. S. Swilling gave a luncheon for Mrs. Greene at her East Lake road home. The hostess and the author's daughter were childhood friends.

For Junior Group.

The Junior Macabees of Hills Park were entertained recently at a picnic and swimming party at North Fulton park. They were chaperoned by Mesdames H. G. Landers, J. L. Miller and Mazie Nelson, supervisor of the club.

Present were Barbara Landers, Anne Bennett, Irene Hicks, Mary Jo Smith, Marjorie Smith, Julian Dodd, Pete Brewer, Tommy Turner, George Turner, Hiram Lee Miller, Mrs. H. Landers, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Miller, Mrs. Florence Vaughn and Mrs. Mazie Nelson.

A. D. Pi Alumnae Outline Rush Plans

The alumnae of Alpha Delta Pi, college social sorority, attended a meeting recently at the home of their president, Miss Olive Bell Davis on Peachtree Battle avenue. The hostess was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Charles M. Davis. Delightful refreshments were served after the meeting.

Rushing plans were discussed, and parties were arranged for rushees of the approaching college year, the first of these to be a luncheon held in the Paradise room at the Henry Grady hotel, next Saturday at 12:45 o'clock.

An informal party will be given at the home of Mrs. J. A. Higgs Jr. at 1222 Clifton road on Wednesday evening, August 26. Games including badminton, horseshoe pitching, dart throwing and dancing will be enjoyed.

Climaxing these parties will be the annual coffee held at the Piedmont Driving Club on Friday morning, September 4 at 11 o'clock.

'Museum News' Ceases Publication

"Museum News," the Atlanta Art Association paper, will cease publication for the duration. It has recorded the outstanding art news and features in this city since March 1, 1941.

Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn, vice president of the Atlanta Art Association and the gracious donor of Memory Lane, nationally known memorial wing gallery of the High Museum of Art, is editor. Miss Ellen St. John Barnwell is associate editor and Mrs. E. Bates Block is feature writer. In the spirit of the times the closing issue featured a portrait of General MacArthur on the cover. A monthly bulletin of events will be mailed members of the Atlanta Art Association.

Mrs. Carling Dinkler Jr. accompanied by Miss Patricia Paulk, of Jacksonville, Fla., has returned from a trip to Mexico and the west coast. Miss Paulk has departed for her home in Jacksonville following a visit to Mrs. Dinkler.

Mrs. Hal C. Miller is visiting in Barre, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Brook Reeve are spending several days at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

H. W. Smith is ill at U. S. hospital 48, where he underwent an operation.

Bobby Wilson has returned from Crawford W. Long hospital, where he underwent a tonsillectomy.

Mrs. J. L. Moore is ill at Crawford W. Long hospital.

Brad Wofford, of Camp Wheeler, recently visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Wofford on Colonial drive.

Paul Tanner and Bruce Attaway, of the U. S. Navy, recently visited their parents in Brookhaven.

F. P. Fletcher continues ill at his home on Pine Grove avenue.

Mrs. J. G. Taylor, Mrs. J. G. Taylor Jr. and daughter, Barbara Ann, were the recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Smith and family in Brookhaven.

Mrs. S. B. Harker is ill at Crawford W. Long hospital, where she is suffering from a broken ankle.

Mrs. D. L. Moore is ill at her home on Oglethorpe avenue.

Mrs. Charles F. Jones Jr., the former Miss Miriam Vandigriff, is visiting her husband, who is attending the United States Naval Training School in Boston, Mass.

Miss Jean Swingley, of 620 East Morningside drive, N. E., is visiting friends in New Orleans, La.

Judy and Joan Anderson, of Lakeview avenue, N. E., are spending some time as the guests of Colonel Kingsley Anderson and family on their plantation "Reveille" near Camp Pickett, Va.

Miss Evelyn Putman is recuperating from an operation at the Ponce de Leon Eye and Ear infirmary.

Frank Hayward Jr. is in New York City.

Mrs. C. F. Andrews and daughter, Emily Little Andrews, of Macon, are spending several days with Mrs. F. W. Muller at her home on West Peachtree street.

MISS MARY FRANCES WHISNANT, OF FORT MYERS, FLA. Miss Whisnant, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. Whisnant, of Fort Myers, is an attractive visitor here and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Michael T. Lambert at their home on Peachtree circle.

Richardson-Shaw Marriage Takes Place at Chapel Rites

The little chapel at Glenn Memorial church formed the setting on Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock for the marriage of Miss Helen Jeannette Richardson, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Adrian Richardson, and Jack Raymond Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winfred Shaw.

Rev. Nat G. Long performed the marriage. While the guests assembled a musical program was presented by Myra Barber Cavan and Douglas Wauchope, organist. Adorning the altar were vases filled with white gladioli. Candelabra, which held burning white tapers, completed the decorations.

Melvin Richardson, brother of the bride, and John Oliver Braselton, acted as ushers. Serving as best man was Private Lewis M. Richardson, the bride's brother.

Miss Sarah Frances McDonald, the maid of honor, wore a stunning aqua crepe gown styled with a bouffant marquisette skirt. She carried a bouquet of yellow and orchid asters.

White marquisette and hand-made Chantilly lace fashioned the bride's exquisite gown. The bouffant skirt extended to form a train, which was edged with Chantilly lace. Her finger-tip length veil of illusion tulle was caught to a coronet of orange blossoms. The gown and veil belong to Mrs. Thad C. Childs, a close friend of the bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. For her wedding she wore a gown of white satin with a finger-tip-length veil of illusion tulle. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums and orchids.

Polk County's Souvenir Gun Sold as Scrap

Cannon Was Captured From Germans in World War I.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. CEDARTOWN, Aug. 16.—Polk county's cannon, captured from German forces during World War I, and bearing the placard "I came from Germany but want to go back—the American way," began its return journey in retaliation against the Axis Saturday when it was sent to a blast furnace and melted into scrap.

The gun, a gift from the late Seventh District Congressman Gordon Lee, of Polk county, the year after the 1918 armistice, has been a marker on the courthouse square by courtesy of the Cedartown chapter of the American Legion. It was given to the current salvage campaign and brought $300 at auction today. The proceeds of the sale were turned over to the Polk county USO drive.

The auction was attended by a number of Cedartown citizens. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Cedartown high school band and addresses were made by Colonel C. C. Dunn, Colonel W. H. Trawick and Sheriff T. P. Lyons, who acted as auctioneer.

KIWANIS TO MEET.

Lewis F. Gordon, vice president in charge of public relations, Citizens & Southern National Bank, will speak on "The Civilian's Part in War" at the weekly luncheon-meeting of the Atlanta Kiwanis Club at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Ansley hotel.

James Brown, Investment Broker, Is Dead

Partner in Clement A. Evans & Company Was 46 Years of Age.

James A. Brown, 46, prominent figure in Atlanta investment security circles and a partner in Clement A. Evans & Company, investment brokers, died yesterday at his residence, 75 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E.

A son of the late Rev. and Mrs. James Alfred Brown, of Greenville, S. C., he was born at Due West, S. C., on October 14, 1895.

He attended school at Due West and Greenville and was graduated from Furman University, where he was a member of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity, in 1916. He attended the Air Corps school at Princeton University during World War I.

Brown came to Atlanta in 1922 as a vice president of the Trust Company of Georgia. He left there in December, 1934, to become president of the Equitable Company, where he remained until 1941.

At that time he joined the C. A. Evans & Company.

He was a member of the Capital City Country Club and the Piedmont Driving Club.

He is survived by three sisters, Miss Annie H. Brown, of Greenville; Mrs. Charles G. King, of Easley, S. C.; Mrs. Ernest Moore, of Shelby, N. C., and three brothers, Daniel A. Brown, of Washington, D. C.; Jack S. and William T. Brown, of St. George, S. C.

Federal services will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at Spring Hill. The Rev. Arthur Jackson will officiate. H. M. Patterson & Sons will send the body to Greenville for burial.
